This Earth in Future Ages. Surprise for Field No. 1. Action Alone Counts. In the Cocktail Trenches.

The great world's fair, to which New York city and Mayor La Guardia invite all creation for 1939, will be a REAL world's fair. The city will spend one hundred and twenty-five million dollars getting it ready, and the rest of the United States is expected to spend at least one billion dollars at the fair and in New York, and many millions in states and cities through which visitors will pass in their automobiles.

Fifty million visitors are expected in New York, most amazing city in the world, with skyscrapers that make the "hanging gardens" of Babylon, look like baby carriages; its population including all races, all opinions, all antagonisms and the energy of the whole world.

Part of the fair's program, after showing all the wonders accomplished since the days of George Washington, is to indicate the wonderful things to come.

That will be difficult. He who invented the bow and arrow could not imagine the machine gun, the first that ever hitched a tame buffalo to a sled could not imagine the airplane. Nobody in New York or anywhere else can imagine what the earth and men will be, as time and its millions of years pass.

For one thing, it is safe to predict that big cities, New York, Paris, London, will vanish as the buried cities of the deserts

Woman Drowns As Auto Plunges In Maine River

A Canton woman was drowned and a Dorchester woman narrowly escaped death in Portland, Me., today when their sedan skidded, sideswiped the concrete abutment of a bridge and plunged into the Cousins river.

Miss Anne Hanson, 52, of Canton, was trapped in the capsized sedan and drowned before aid reached her.

Miss Gertrude Floyd, 52, of 14 Rockland avenue, Dorchester, operator of the car, was thrown clear as the sedan hurtled off the highway and sank into the 10-foot depths of the river.

Lawrence Freeman and Karl Chase, both of Norton, Mass., discovered the tragedy when they investigated after noting the fence had been smashed.

Bubbles on the surface of the river told them that a car was in its depths. Freeman plunged into the water and extricated Miss Floyd. Chase dived many times for the other woman's body, but was unable to wrench it free from the car.

John A. Hall of Newton Upper Falls, brother-in-law of Miss Floyd, who was preceding the women in his own car, was unaware of the tragedy until he doubled back on the road to find out what had delayed them.

MacFadden Unhurt In Plane Crash

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 10 (AP)—Bernarr MacFadden, magazine publisher, and his daughters escaped injury this morning when MacFadden's airplane crashed through a steel wire fence at Stinson Field here, the municipal airport, as he was taking off for Houston.

The ship was wrecked and MacFadden, who is making a speaking tour of the state in behalf of Governor Landon's candidacy for President, chartered another ship and left for Houston.

Newton Girl Killed in Crash

Margaret Walden, 21, of Blithedale road, Newtonville, was instantly killed in an automobile crash today at Chambersburg, Pa., while en route from Antioch College, Yellow Springs, O., to New York city.

She was a junior in the college's school of business administration. She was riding to New York with three other students to start work in a New York department store.

Another girl student was also killed while two men students were injured. The other death victim was Harriet Randall, 21, of Cleveland.

The Newton girl was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Walden.

According to police, the car crashed into a pole when the driver, alleged to have been James Myers of Cos Cob, Ct., dozed at the wheel.

DEMS BUYING VOTES, SAYS LANDON

Cincinnati, Oct. 10—(INS)—Carrying a fighting campaign against President Roosevelt through the pivotal states of the midwest, Governor Alfred M. Landon today boldly charged the administration with attempting to buy the election through the use of public funds.

In a breakfast speech here to wildly cheering Republicans, the Republican nominee said.

"We are opposed by the most powerful machine ever assembled on American soil. It is financed in a large part out of the public treasury. This means our money is paying for it.

"It is allocating public funds up and down the country on the eve of the election for the obvious purpose of attempting to sway the electorate.

"It is endeavoring to coerce thousands of voters by threatening those on relief with destitution unless they vote right. It is trying to poison the mind of the public with a campaign of vicious misrepresentation."

IN FIGHTING MOOD

But undismayed by the prospects, Landon in fighting tones declared: "Can this New Deal machine, which, under the cloak of ideal-

65 FACE QUIZ IN HACK-SACK SLAYING

Sixty-five persons, including men prominent in Boston social and civic life, will be questioned in connection with the gruesome "Merry Widow" slaying of Mrs. Grayce Asquith, detectives revealed today.

Officials compiled the list from information received from neighbors, correspondence found in the Weymouth "murder" cottage and from Oscar Battalini, 50-year-old Quincy chef, said to have been one of the last persons to see Mrs. Asquith alive.

Those names include not only social callers, but every one who at one time or another went into the cottage.

Included in the list are men who have figured in political life and others whose names are known in the Boston underworld.

Detectives revealed that a roundup of all 65 persons would be started immediately.

2ND MURDER SEEN

Theory that a second murder was committed in the Weymouth cottage was given credence today as a report was awaited from chemists and pathologists toiling in the state police department's crime detection laboratory.

They hoped to prove before nightfall that two persons, a man and a woman, were slain and dismembered in the Alpine road, Weymouth, cottage.

They hoped to demonstrate beyond a doubt that the gay Weymouth widow was beaten to death and butchered in her lakeside cottage.

LANDON ASSAILS NEW DEAL'S UNBALANCED BUDGET

WASTE ENDING PROMISED BY NOMINEE

Following is the complete text of Governor Alfred M. Landon's speech at Chicago.

Tonight I am going to talk about the Federal budget. And incidentally I, too, am going to talk about it in billions.

First, let me make my position absolutely clear. If I am elected, the budget is going to be balanced, not by depriving our needy of relief, not by refusing adequate aid to our farmers, not by swamping the country with taxes.

The budget is going to be balanced by cutting out waste and extravagance; by putting an end to the use of public funds for political purposes; by restoring hard-working painstaking, common-sense administration.

The question of balancing the budget is of vital importance to every man, woman and child in this country.

3 Reasons

Let me give you three reasons why this is true.

It is true because upon the financial stability of the United States Government depends the stability of trade and employment, and of the entire banking, saving and insurance system of the country.

Those words are not mine. They were also spoken by Candidate Roosevelt at Pittsburgh, four years ago.

It is true because "if the nation, like a spendthrift, throws discretion to the winds, is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending, extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay and continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy."

Those words are not true. They were also spoken by Candidate Roosevelt at Pittsburgh four years ago.

Quotes Roosevelt

It is true because—"taxes are paid in the end by the average man who labors, because they are a burden on production . . . if excessive they are reflected in idle factories, tax-sold farms and in hordes of the hungry tramping the streets and seeking jobs in vain."

Those words are not mine. They were also spoken by Candidate Roosevelt at Pittsburgh four years ago.

Now let us turn to the record. Let us see if federal spending was reduced, if taxes were lowered, if deficits were stopped, everyone knows the answer, but it is worth emphasizing how much.

Four years ago the federal government spent just over five billion dollars. Last year it spent just under nine billion dollars.

Four years ago the gross federal debt was twenty-one billion dollars. Today it is thirty-four billion dollars.

Spending Rises

Those are the facts. Instead of a decrease, we have had an enormous increase in taxation—an increase in spending, an increase in taxes, an increase in debt—in fact, every man, every housewife knows only too well, have increased the cost of living, that is only a summary of what has happened to the financial pledges of candidate Roosevelt. Let us see what else has happened to the financial pledges of President Roosevelt.

Time after time we have been assured by the President and his spokesmen that no more taxes would be imposed. But under this administration, fourteen bills increasing the tax burden have been jammed through Congress.

And as for his assurances that the budget would be balanced. —Well, these political hush-daringa have become annual fixtures. The first one was shortly after he took office in 1933. The next was in January, 1934. The next in January, 1935. The next in January, 1936, and the last at Pittsburgh two weeks ago. And this last, as usual, was accompanied by the promise that no more taxes would be necessary.

Threat to U. S.

That is the record. Instead of a balanced budget, we have a confession of incompetence—a confession by those in charge of our government that they have set loose a flood of spending that they are unable to stop.

Let us examine this policy of spending. Let us look at the theory and then look at the amounts involved, and the threat to the country if it is continued.

The simple and amazing theory behind this spending was sold to the administration by a British economist. He said that if only the United States Government would spend four hundred million dollars a month, it would prime the pump and all would be well.

So we started spending, not for the multitude of things we really needed, but for every conceivable thing. The idea was off to a good start. We have been spending at the rate of six hundred million a month and more ever since.

Just consider what this meant. It meant making a special strike of spending for spending's sake. It meant saying to some 850,000 government employes: "Don't watch out for the economy of the government. Get rid of them as fast as possible."

What has been the result of this policy, in the three and one-half years ending June 30 last, the federal government spent more than twenty-five billion dollars. This was more than all of the Presidents of the United States from George Washington to Woodrow Wilson spent in 124 years.

Two Books

In his last speech, the President overlooked this record. That is not surprising. At least it is no more surprising than the method of bookkeeping adopted by this administration.

For the first time in history—in war or in peace, in prosperity or in depression—the Treasury of the United States is keeping two sets of books.

Under such a system, items are transferred and re-transferred, as they are by this administration, without rhyme or reason, from one set of books to the other. No definite line is drawn between ordinary expenditures and so-called emergency expenditures. No one, unless he is in the confidence of those who juggle the figures, can determine accurately what is going on. Of course, you can rely on the daily Treasury statement to present accurate figures. But surrounding the two billion dollar stabilization fund, and the juggling of revenue and expenditure items, not even an expert can obtain a clear picture of the exact condition of the United States Treasury.

But in spite of this system of bookkeeping, in spite of all this juggling of figures, there are certain facts that it has been impossible for this administration to hide.

Now consider the so-called emergency expenditures.

In the name of emergency, this administration has created no less than 75 new bureaus, agencies and what-nots.

Certainly no one can seriously maintain that all of these conflicting bureaus are necessary. Neither can anyone seriously maintain that it is necessary for our government to have hundreds upon hundreds of press and publicity agents—hundreds upon hundreds of just plain hackers carrying on party propaganda at the expense of the taxpayer.

There is still another set of figures connected with emergency expenses that deserve attention. There are expenditures classified as relief.

Now the fact of the matter is that since the N. R. A. was kicked out there has been a substantial recovery in this country. Yet in spite of this, relief expenses keep right on increasing.

At the present time we are spending for so-called relief at the rate of $2,500,000,000 a year, or $1,500,000,000 more than in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934. And still, in spite of all this spending the administration has not redeemed its pledge to give every man on relief a job.

Now obviously there is something wrong here. Everybody knows what it is. A lot of the money spent in the name of relief has nothing to do with relief. And a lot of the money has been wasted.

If I am elected there will be an end to this spending of relief funds for other purposes. There will be no more wholesale waste and extravagance. And there will be efficient administration of our public affairs. That is how the budget can be balanced—how it can be balanced without reducing by a single dollar the necessary payments to those actually in need.

The Federal Government has become a vast sieve through which taxpayers' money is being poured in constantly increasing volume.

Never in the history of government has there been such prodigate spending. Anyone at all familiar with what has been going on could almost count on the fingers of one hand foolish experiments the Government could cut out and save at least a billion dollars any time it wanted to.

No Figures

What can ultimately be accomplished in the way of reduction it is impossible to determine, since detailed figures are not available and future commitments are unrevealed.

But I mean to balance the budget. And I am not going to take four years to do it. With a reduction in government expenditures, I am convinced there will be such a rebirth of confidence that we will have a real recovery—the kind of recovery that means re-employment. That, in turn, will not only reduce expenditures further, but will expand government income.

If the family income of this country are to be relieved from this intolerable burden—if the specter of inflation and bankruptcy is to be set at rest, a change of administration is absolutely imperative.

Election-eve repentance will not do. The give-me-another chance plea will not avail. No matter how sincere the good intentions of the present administration may be, they can never be translated into an effective program of economy.

Can't Stop

The reasons for this are obvious: an administration which starts a policy of spending for spending's sake dares not stop it. An administration which created a multitude of new offices, which embarks on all manner of new ventures, which spends money to keep itself in power, dares not risk the angry votes that would result from economy.

Today, our various governments, federal, state and local, are taxing through taxation, almost 20 per cent of the national income. One fifth of the average income of every man, woman and child in this country goes to the cost of government—one dollar out of every five.

This is altogether too much. But even this is not the whole story. In addition, they are spending enormous sums obtained by borrowing. When this borrowing is added to what government takes from us in taxes, we find it is spending 30 per cent of the national income, or a dollar and a half out of every five.

In the matter of borrowing the federal government is the outstanding offender. For every dollar the federal government has received since March, 1933, it has spent two dollars.

Children to Suffer

We cannot—we must not—place this burden upon our children. We must remember that they, too, may have emergencies. We must make it possible for them to live their lives without having to pay for the financial follies of their parents.

Every generation the necessary activities of government increase. This is inevitable because of the increasing complexity of civilization. Unless we match carefully every penny we spend, unless we cut out every trace of waste and extravagance, these necessary activities are going to suffer. Every dollar that is spent foolishly means a dollar less for the things that are necessary and wise.

Let me quote once more the words of the President. In March, 1933, he said: "Too often in recent history, liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy."

He spoke truly. A loose fiscal policy—and that is certainly a polite term for what we have today—will wreck any government. It will wreck the government of the United States unless we stop it. We must put the spenders out.

History's Lesson

For remember: Those who preach spending, practice spending, and brag about spending, cannot stop spending. This is the lesson of history. That is the record of this administration. They are proud of their spending. They talk of it as though preserving the financial integrity of the United States were only a game.

The American people know that is more than a game—that our very existence depends upon keeping our financial house in order. But if the administration wants a baseball analogy—if they want the score—it is easy to give. It is written clear across the country:

Twenty-five billion dollars spent.

Thirteen billion dollars added to the public Debt.

Eleven million unemployed left on base.

Chickens Come Home to Roost

Copyright, 1936, American Newspapers, Inc.

Out on a limb in twilight dim
They haunt the weeping willow,
Three birds of doom above the tomb
Where New Deal pledges lie in gloom
Upon an earthen pillow.

They croak: "You ain't seen nothin' yet—
There will be more tomorrow."

COUGHLIN TALK KEY TO STATE ELECTIONS

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Indicating tremendous interest in the big meeting of the National Union for Social Justice at National League Park next Monday, requests for tickets have swamped the office of former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, Union party candidate for Vice-President, and United States senator.

The announcement that the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin will deliver a special message to New England is causing lively speculation in political circles, particularly among Democrats.

The Monday address of the famous radio priest, who is strenuously against every candidate espousing the cause of President Roosevelt, will have an important effect upon the political situation here in Massachusetts, politicians believe.

$10,000 "JOKE" FLOPS

Special invitations for the meeting have been extended to the state commanders of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled Veterans of the World War and Spanish War Veterans.

Word has been received at O'Brien headquarters from Police Commissioner Eugene McSweeney that a detail of police will be furnished as a body guard for Rev. Coughlin.

It is understood, however, that police inside the grounds, other than the personal detail, will not be available unless services are paid for.

Following the visit of the Rev. Coughlin, candidate O'Brien will launch a vigorous campaign right up until the eve of the election.

Aside from the pending visit of the Rev. Coughlin, the "joke" appropriation of $10,000 by the governor's council for entertainment of President Roosevelt's projected political rally on Boston Common has left a bad taste in the mouths of many prominent members of the party.

ROOSEVELT EMBARRASSED

After all, it is pointed out, the President of the United States was placed in the embarrassing position of having to reject the offer of $10,000 of the taxpayers' money for a political rally, after a formal protest had been made to him by the chairman of the Republican state committee.

It is further stressed that two Republican councillors who attended the council meeting, regarded the appropriation seriously and that it stands as made until the council formally withdraws the order.

Chairman Sinclair Weeks, of the Republican State Committee, in commenting on the governor's action, said in part:

"What else could Governor Curley do when he received a poke on the chin from the President, than try to smile and call it a joke? At least the President, on receiving my telegram, did not see the joke.

"On November 3, the people will show their appreciation of this kind of humor. After all, 'he laughs best who laughs last.'"

TODAY'S Boondoggle

Since the days of the Caesars and the Roman circuses, the wise politicians have known that in times of strife the populace must be amused.

So in Lawton, Okla., the Works Progress Administration is building $10,000 worth of shelter houses, suspension and foot bridges, and concrete skating rinks in the parks. The Federal Treasury pays more than 75 per cent of the cost.

FARM BELT 'WARNING'

Roosevelt Tries to Heal Rifts

En Route With President Roosevelt to Omaha, Oct. 10 (INS)—President Roosevelt is finding the road to Democratic victory in the northwest marked with several "warning" signs such as the caustic editorial observation carefully when driving an unfamiliar route.

In Minnesota where the twin cities of St. Paul and Minnesota give him literally a tremendous reception the President finds the Democrats split into two savagely warring camps over the surrender of the state's candidates to the dominant Farmet-Labor party.

For the first time in modern history, the Democrats have no candidate for governor and senator in Minnesota this year, having withdrawn their own candidates to support the Farmer-Laborites in a frank trade for Farmer-Labor support for the national Democratic ticket.

Mr. Roosevelt delayed his departure from St. Paul far beyond the schedule last night, while he employed persuasive tactics to bring the recalcitrants into line.

In Nebraska, where Mr. Roosevelt was headed today, via Iowa, another involved political situation confronted him. The President would like to see Nebraska return to the Senate that veteran insurgent and Republican New Dealer, George W. Norris, father of the TVA. But Senator Norris delayed his decision to stand for re-election so long that Terry Carpenter gained the Democratic nomination, and ex-congressman Robert G. Simmons won the Republican nomination.

Norris is now belatedly running as an independent candidate.

The result, in Nebraska, as in Minnesota, is a split Democratic party, which may not operate to Mr. Roosevelt's advantage in November, especially if things are close.

However, the President left Minnesota for Nebraska with the assurance of all factions, including the dominant Farmer-Laborites, that the 11 Gopher electoral votes are his next month.

Well satisfied with these predictions and his own mediatory efforts, Mr. Roosevelt turned southward for another day's campaigning through the corn fields of Iowa, which will culminate tonight in his answering Governor Landon's recent agricultural speech.

lem, has operated on the old spoils system, to his benefit? I say it can."

This militant speech came on the heels of a devastating attack on Roosevelt spending policies at Chicago.

There, the Republican nominee told a wildly enthusiastic audience of 23,000 with 10,000 assembled outside—that he would balance the Georgia budget, if elected President, without curtailing relief to the needy or benefits to farmers, simply by slashing the waste and extravagance of the Roosevelt administration.

QUOTES FOE

Amid tumultuous applause, Landon took out of President Roosevelt's own mouth three powerful reasons for balancing the budget. He quoted the President in his Pittsburgh speech of the 1932 campaign as giving these reasons for a balanced budget:

"1. Upon the financial stability of the United States Government depends the stability of trade and employment, and of the entire banking, savings and insurance systems of the country.

"2. If the nation, like a spendthrift throws discretion to the winds, it is on the road to bankruptcy.

"3. Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors, because they are a burden on production, and if excessive, they are reflected in idle factories, tax-sold farms and in hordes of the hungry tramping the streets and seeking jobs in vain."

The crowd wildly applauded Landon as he enunciated the first of the three "Roosevelt Reasons."

It appeared shocked when the Republican nominee blandly announced he was repeating the words of "Candidate Roosevelt" in 1932.

It caught on promptly, however, and "booed" heartily as Landon repeated Roosevelt's two other reasons.

In good sportsmanship, Landon raised his right hand and shook his head negatively in a vain effort to halt the booing.

3 RALLIES END THRILL WEEK FOR G. O. P.

By L. CONANT, JR.

A week of suburban rallies by the state Republican ticket will be climaxed tonight by a series of meetings in Chelsea, Winthrop and Revere.

The size of the audiences and the demonstrations accorded the speakers during the past week has been almost unprecedented at this stage of a campaign.

Next week will be devoted to an intensive whirlwind swing of the western part of the state.

In a radio speech, Leverett Saltonstall, Republican nominee for lieutenant-governor, attacked "intimidation of WPA workers for political purposes" and declared that "nothing more reprehensible can be laid at the door of the state administration than evidence it plays politics with the sufferings and needs of our citizens."

"The Democrats would like the voters to forget," he said, "that not a single Democrat now seeking again to control the state government has repented or repudiated these official misdeeds.

"In fact, by their support of the man who now heads that administration they endorse and condone this misgovernment.

"With the support of the voters the Republican party will take the state out of the hands of an irresponsible, wasteful machine and put it where it rightfully belongs—in the hands of the people."

SCORES HURLEY

Declaring that his Democratic opponent, Charles F. Hurley, "had no labor record to offer the people," John W. Haigis, Republican gubernatorial nominee questioned if the "working men and women of the state would entrust their welfare to the hands of a man who simply promises to have their problems in mind."

During his ten years of service in the House and Senate, Haigis stated that he had showed his interest in labor in a concrete manner by supporting measure after measure beneficial to the wokingman.

"Now my legislative record which was endorsed by the Springfield Central Labor Union in 1934 is exactly the same record on which I stand today," he declared.

"FALSE FRONT"

Speaking of the pamphlet issued by the so-called Voters' Farmers Non-Partisan Political Committee, "which pretends to speak for organized labor," Haigis described it as a "false front behind which my Democratic opponent hides in his attempt to falsely" represent labor.

He quoted from a letter of October 5, 1908 signed by Kenneth I. Tweedale, then of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, that this pamphlet "in no way represents the views of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor towards your candidacy for Governor."

BATTALINI KEY WITNESS

home and that hets and none others were the burlap-wrapped legs and lower torso found in last Monday by the waters of Boston Harbor.

They also hoped to prove that a double not a single murder took place in Mrs. Asquith's little white bungalow, on September 12. The second victim being an admirer of the slain woman—an admirer now said to be identified as John Albert Lyons, missing Back Bay war veteran.

Evidence on which the laboratory experts are relying is as strange and weird as any ever obtained in investigation of a Massachusetts crime.

It is organic matter taken from the bathtub pipes and the drainage system of Mrs. Asquith's cottage.

This organic matter, in the opinion of State Police Chemist Joseph Walker, includes minute bits of human tissue, carried off by running water even after the murderer, observed murderer, was attempting to conceal his deed by backing limb from limb the bodies of his victims.

It's the task, today, of Chemist Walker and his assistants, to subject to analysis and microscopic scrutiny the supposed shreds of skin, muscle, bone and vital organs.

URNS MISSING

Science can determine police heads were assured, the sex, the race and even the approximate age of the person or persons from whose bodies the organic matter was released by knife blade, butcher's cleaver or saw.

To supplement the tests Boston police chemist Frank Brialin examines blood-stained clothing found in and near the "murder cottage" to see, if possible, whether one or two types of human blood was represented.

If the evidence points to two types of blood, police said it would disprove the theory that Lyons may have been alone at the time, as the blonde widow.

In the search for Lyons, dead or alive, many of his women friends were yesterday questioned by police. One woman, aged about 30, was brought to Boston headquarters by Sergt. Arthur Tiernan and Detective Joseph Hurley and questioned by Sergt. Joseph Fuller of the homicide bureau.

The woman said she knew nothing of Lyons' present whereabouts and declared she had not seen him for three or four weeks.

In their search for additional evidence which might have been overlooked in the early excavation directions yesterday began a minute scrutiny of the ooze of the murder.

They planned a relentless ripping apart of Mrs. Asquith's Weymouth cottage, first planned as an organized effort to locate two huge unsawed organs mysteriously vanished from the cottage lawn.

They hoped to find, in these urns further ghastly clues to the crime revealed by the legs in the harbor.

VICTIM'S BROTHER HERE

To Boston from New York today came Louis F. Griffin, brother of Mrs. Asquith.

After conferring at Boston police headquarters immediately after his arrival, he left for Weymouth to discuss the case with detectives who are working on the murder.

At Weymouth he met Chief of Police Edward Butler that he had not seen his sister for four years, and had only heard from her by mail once. Grayce, he said was a "modest, even-tempered girl." He could imagine no reason why anybody would want to kill her.

First court action in connection with the sack-slaying mystery was scheduled today in Quincy, where state police were prepared to ask Judge Kenneth Nash to hold as a material witness, Oscar Battalini, 50-year-old Quincy handy man.

Battalini, according to his story, was the last person known to have seen Mrs. Asquith and Lyons alive.

He said he left them in Mrs. Asquith's cottage at about 6:30 p. m. Saturday, September 18, the supposed day of the crime.

When Battalini was finally taken from Quincy to the Weymouth police station to be held until time for his court appearance today, he was still bearing up well under the strain of his prominent part in the investigation.

He looked less worn and weary than did many of the officers who, for more than 48 hours, had been going over his story with him, detail by detail.

He was switched over the road between Quincy and Weymouth in a fast police car. Newspapermen who attempted to keep in touch with what was going on during the transfer were not permitted to approach the stocky, scar-faced star witness.

Cameraman thought they'd have a chance for pictures during the ceremony of booking Battalini at the Weymouth police station desk, but found themselves foiled.

The witness wasn't booked at all, but was taken at once to special quarters prepared for him, where he was placed under lock and key for safekeeping.

Meantime the Alpine road, Weymouth, cottage, where the brutal slaying and gruesome dismemberment of the sack murder victim supposedly took place, was outwardly as lonely and deserted as during the week preceding discovery of the crime.

Two Weymouth police officers did service on the premises, but their figures were indistinct in the shadows and they kept their voices low.

The first pair of officers were relieved at midnight, and the guard was changed again at 8 a. m.

Once off duty, none of the sentinels lingered. The murder cottage, with its bloodstained walls and its hint of ghastly secrets still hidden, wasn't a place where a man would feel comfortably at home.

SEEK FOOTPRINT

In the sharply contrasting environment of the state police laboratory today were most of the physical clues which the cottage by the lakeside had yielded.

Here Miss Chemist Walker and his assistant prepared to subject to painstaking and minute scientific analysis the blood-stained clothing, bloodstained bed clothing, window curtains, chair cushions, living room mirror and bathroom fixtures.

Police photographers were busy today enlarging and studying pictures made of traces of what human eyes had been unable to detect at the murder cottage—a clear print, or fragmentary, of Mrs. Asquith's bare foot.

Such a print, if it can be obtained, will be checked with prints which Medical Examiner William J. Brickley of Boston has already made from the feet of the severed limbs recovered from the harbor.

Footprints, like fingerprints, are identifying evidence that can't be controverted, Dr. Brickley pointed out to police.

Seeking further evidence of details of the supposed Weymouth murder and dismemberment, investigating authorities were preparing today to renew their search of the Alpine road cottage and its surrounding grounds.

TEAR DOWN HOUSE

They planned, first, to rip up the cellar floor and dig into and under foundation masonry of the building. They planned to tear down ceilings and break open partitions.

They planned to leave no hiding place for secrets in the home where, as they reconstruct the crime, pretty Mrs. Asquith was savagely beaten to death by an assailant who followed her mercilessly as she staggered, bleeding and terrified, from the living room to her bedroom.

State police reiterated today their belief that Mrs. Asquith's body was stripped where she lay dead and was then carried to the bathtub where the ghastly work of dismemberment was undertaken, probably with a cleaver, a kitchen knife and a carpenter's saw as improvised surgeon's tools.

SURE LYONS SLAIN

While relatives and friends of Lyons, the missing war veteran admirer of Mrs. Asquith, were surer than ever today that the Brighton man must have met with foul play, police continued doggedly their effort to trace Lyons' last known movements and to find him alive, if alive he yet remains.

Detective squads from Boston police headquarters were rushed today to Roxbury Crossing, Malden, Revere and Melrose.

From each of those localities had come reports that a man answering Lyons' description was there.

Each report was run down. Each one proved a false tip.

Lyons' two sisters, Miss Ruth Lyons of Menemet road, Newton, and Mrs. Elizabeth Willis, of Lowell, were together today, in seclusion, at the home of a family friend.

Both reiterated their opinion that their brother must have met with foul play. Otherwise, they said, they were certain he would have come forward to assist in the investigation of Mrs. Asquith's supposed murder and would have got in touch with his relatives, relieving their apprehensions for his safety.

According to Miss Lyons of Newton, who is a secretarial department employe of a Back Bay automobile sales firm, her brother had never expressed fear for his life and had never hinted at having enemies who might threaten him.

Stephen Boyland, well-to-do Newton resident, with whose family Miss Lyons makes her home, put the situation bluntly.

"We feel," he said "that Lyons has been murdered and his body buried. If police want to find him, they'd better start digging."

A state police check-up at the U. S. Veterans bureau, it was announced today, indicated that Lyons never cashed his veterans' bonus, amounting to approximately $1500.

DREW $50 MONTHLY

He served in the United States navy during the world war, contracting an illness which left him permanently disabled. He drew $50 a month compensation.

His October check, uncashed, still awaits him at his St. Botolph street, Back Bay, apartment, from which he has been unaccountably missing for weeks.

Practically completed today was the intensive police investigation of Mrs. Asquith's life background.

Born in Lynn, 41 years ago, she was christened plain "Grace." But she changed it to "Grayce."

That was characteristic. She wanted the glamor and the glitter of gay living.

She sought it in a marriage which turned out unhappily and she sought it in a series of less stable relationships.

She had many men friends, some of them influential. But she failed to find happiness.

She failed even to find safety.

MYSTERY:

Sack Victim Kin Doubts Identity

New York, Oct. 10—A police theory that the dismembered legs found floating Monday in Boston harbor were those of Mrs. Grayce Asquith today had failed to convince Mrs. Asquith's sister-in-law, Mrs. Anna Griffin, of 1729 Caton avenue, Brooklyn.

"The coroner's report shows the victim was not Grayce," said Mrs. Griffin. "The coroner said the legs were sawed from a woman about five feet five inches tall.

"Grayce was a tiny little thing —well under five feet."

Even the news from Boston that police found blood stains, and a crimson-dyed saw and butcher's cleaver in Mrs. Asquith's cottage, from which neighbors said she had been missing for three weeks, failed to shake Mrs. Griffin.

"I refuse to believe Grayce is dead," she said. "Why, who would want to kill her?

"She was the quietest, most amiable woman I have ever known. I never heard her quarrel or argue in my life. She was not interested in men.

"If Grayce really was murdered, there could be no sensible motive but robbery. She had a $1500 fur coat, a $1200 fur wrap and a good deal of jewelry. Grayce always liked jewelry."

Mrs. Griffin described her husband's sister-in-law as "very beautiful with tiny hands and feet."

Mrs. Griffin's husband, Louis F. Griffin, left for Boston as soon as he heard the victim of the dissection murder had been tentatively identified as his sister.

Find Woman Dead In So. Boston Doorway

Within the shadow of the South Boston police station, a woman about 45 years old was found dead in an Athens street doorway today.

Elbows propped on the stairs, her feet resting on the sidewalk, the dead woman was discovered by a passerby who at first believed she was sitting on the stairs to recuperate a fainting spell.

Preliminary examination by a police physician failed to determine the cause of death and the body was removed to the Southern Mortuary where Medical Examiner William Waters, will perform an autopsy.

No bruises or marks of violence were found on the woman's body, and police inclined to the theory that she might have suffered a heart attack.

A search of her clothing failed to disclose any clew as to her identity. However, police hope to trace her through trade marks on her clothing.

Officers canvassed the neighborhood for information leading to identification.

Five Driven Out By Brookline Fire

Five members of the family of Patrick Brennan were driven from their home in Thayer place, Brookline, today as fire of undetermined origin swept the upper floor of the building, causing $2000 damage.

The blaze was discovered by a member of the family, who aroused others. Forced to flee were Brennan, his wife, a son, Thomas, and two daughters, Louise and Mary.

5 FACE COURT IN HOLDUP

Five men faced the police lineup today while a sixth battled for his life at City Hospital after a police roundup of the alleged gang which attempted to steal the payroll of the Meisel Press Manufacturing Company, Dorchester avenue, Dorchester.

At City Hospital is Lou Kirsch, alias Joseph Freidman, 29, of New York, who was critically wounded when Charles Meisel, president of the company, started a gun battle with the bandits.

Kirsch was shot four times and abandoned by his three companions in the attempted holdup. Meisel went to police headquarters and allegedly identified photographs of the bandits.

Police then went out and took three men into custody near Dover street. Two more were picked up on Northampton street.

Maine Ship to Be Sunk After Film

Hollywood, Oct. 10 (AP)—The square-rigger, Star of Finland, last of the old Alaska packers' fleet, is about to become a movie star, Paramount announced today.

It will be refurnished and used in a film called "Souls at Sea."

Studio records showed the famous old ship was built in Bath, Me., in 1895, for a member of the Hawaiian royal family.

Later, she was sold to the Alaska packers and queened it over the fishing trade for nearly a quarter of a century. Ten years ago, the ship was laid up in the Alameda Estuary, left to rot in the mud.

The ship will be taken to sea once more, on a movie "location." Then it will probably be sunk, the studio said.

Maine Girl Victim, Mother Held

Mexico Me., Oct. 10 (AP)—Margaret Fredericks, 11, was slain by hammer blows on the head as she slept in her home today and her mother, Mrs. Fenwick Fredericks, who attempted suicide, was in a Rumford Hospital under police guard charged with murder.

Another daughter, Joy, 14, also was attacked by her mother, County Attorney Abbott said, but was awakened by the blows and fought her way from the house to seek help from neighbors.

Mrs. Frederick's husband was working in a mill on a night shift when the slaying occurred.

Abbott said Mrs. Fredericks, who will be given a mental examination after arraignment, left several notes in which she attributed her act to a "plot" and asking forgiveness.

Her husband said he knew nothing of the "plot" to which his wife referred.

The Senator

Sand-Bag Coming Hooray! Hooray!

"The sand-bag is coming, hooray, hooray," sang the Senator as he lifted through the door of Timmy's Tavern, choice ales and wines (adv.)

"Who is sand-bagging who?" Timmy asked, with a grievous disregard for grammar.

THE SENATOR

"Just the Democrats trying to sand-bag their fellow Democrats once again, Timmy. Back in June Timmy, I told you about the pretty little scheme they had in Washington, and how each federal employee was to be smacked with a one dollar ticket which would entitle him to sit in a barracks and listen to the Roosevelt speech of acceptance.

"You murdered them inside that time, Senator," Timmy said, "and your heel settled their hash. You are a great man, Senator, in your noisy manner."

"My constituents think so," the Senator said modestly, "but now I am interested in another proposition of the same type. This is a secret that the Boston Democratic City Committee is keeping quiet, so do not repeat it."

"I'm a listener, a sewer, and a nodder," Timmy said. "Secrets are sacred."

100,000 Books

"Well, the City Committee plans to hold a field day and Democratic rally at Braves Field on October 30. One hundred thousand chance books are being printed, and will be sold at one dollar the copy, if possible. The sand-bags are coming, so be, so be and a small libation, please."

"Chances on what, Senator?" Timmy asked.

"On automobiles and refrigerators and things of that nature, but you miss the point like a drunken quail thrower. The Federal scheme of sand-bagging the employees was held illegal. If you can't sand-bag federal employees, a court might look down its judicial beak at an attempt to coerce city employees. My intimets tell me it is a shake-down. My legal advisor will tell me whether or not it is even legal.

I am a hound and a beagle, Timmy, when it comes to protecting the rights of my constituents."

"Well," said Timmy, "that seems to be that."

"Seems to be so that," said the Senator, "and is that. Meanwhile my heart is bleeding for Francis I. Kelly, who is the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor. He is also being sand-bagged neatly and effectively, and he is spending a great deal of time, these days and nights, just being mad."

"At who, Senator?" Timmy asked with the same fine disdain for the niceties of the King's English.

Mad at Glynn

"Well, at Teddy Glynn for one, because Teddy does not ask for the election of Kelly when speaking at rallies. At Dave Lasker, former assistant D. A., for two. Lasker is in charge of the Charles F. Hurley headquarters in Ward 14, Dorchester, and refuses to put up the Kelly banner. At the State Democratic Committee for three, because they are not supporting him. The lad is the lonesome warrior of the Democratic ticket."

"A fine boy, too," said Timmy, "and ain't it a pity, especially in this year when it's one for all and all for one."

"Well, maybe Eddie McLaughlin, the Fire Commissioner, will straighten out a lot of things. It hurt the Democratic big-wigs no end to call him in for advice, but in desperation, they were forced to."

"Senator, I attended a lecture on Ireland in the South End the other night," Timmy said.

"Don't tell me," the Senator replied. "I'll tell you. The recreation group of the WPA advertised a lecture on Ireland by William H. O'Brien, with Irish folk songs and dances at the John J. Williams Municipal Building, Right? And the lecture on Ireland consisted of an eulogy of the Roosevelt administration, with reasons why he should be re-elected, Right?"

"Right both times," said Timmy, "but who is William H. O'Brien, the famous Irish leftluser?"

"Only the assignment officer of WPA at 18 Oliver street, Tweetsweet to you, Timmy, for today."

"Tweet-tweet, Senator."

LIST 340,000 CITY VOTERS IN DRIVE

By WILLIAM C. CONWAY

Boston Democratic leaders are jubilant today over the announcement by the Election Commissioners that the registration total in the city has passed the 340,000 goal set early in the drive for new voters.

The Democratic City Committee, headed by John W. Newman, which has been in charge of the registration drive, set a new goal at 360,000 and freely predicted that the figure would be reached before 10 p. m. next Wednesday, the final hour for registering to vote in the presidential election.

"We have been putting an average of 2000 voters a day on the list," Newman said, "and we expect to put on 20,000 more before the closing day.

"Two years ago, we put on 8000 voters on the final day. I don't believe we'll have any trouble reaching the 360,000 mark."

Democratic party leaders are elated over the high registration figure in Boston and reports from local city and town committee leaders added to their joy. Reports of increased registration are coming in daily to Chairman Joseph McGrath of the State committee.

RUMORS SPIKED

Chairman Newman of the Boston Democratic City Committee today spiked rumors that his committee had refused to endorse the entire Democratic state ticket.

"We endorsed the ticket at a meeting held last Sunday night," Newman said, "We will hold a meeting tomorrow night in the Copley square hotel to make plans for a gigantic rally to be held for the state ticket candidates on Friday evening, October 30, in National League Park."

As local leaders continue their drive for new voters, the state ticket candidates will wind up a week of intensive campaigning when they address rallies in Brockton and Rockland tonight.

State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Democratic gubernatorial nominee, in a radio address and at rallies last night, charged that his opponent had "deliberately lied" in linking his name with former City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan, owner of the now defunct Legal Securities Corporation. He said:

"You knew, Mr. Haigis, that in my six years as state treasurer, millions of dollars have been expended by me in the purchase of bonds and securities—and you know that on these particular bonds the Commonwealth of Massachusetts did not lose one penny and can sell these bonds today at a profit of $193,611."

State Treasurer Hurley pointed out that the predominantly Republican ways and means committee of the Legislature had thoroughly investigated every bond purchased under his administration and had approved of the purchases.

NO SCANDAL

"I have never violated my oath of office," State Treasurer Hurley said. "During my six years as state treasurer the breath of scandal has never been attached to me or to my office.

"Not one dollar of my expenditures has been questioned until this day and now only maliciously. Not one dollar has been spent improperly. Not one dollar has gone for graft. Today the credit of the Commonwealth stands unimpaired."

While the state ticket candidates have been winning most of the spotlight during the past two weeks, local candidates have been continuing their pre-election battles.

LOSES BEANO LICENSE

City Revokes Church's Permit

Revocation of the Beano license of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, the first since Mayor Mansfield's Beano edict some weeks ago, was announced today by license officials at City Hall.

Under the rules set up by the mayor, revocation of license for violation of any of the newly laid laws governing the games means permanent loss of the license.

Assistant City Censor Joseph Mankiajewski said the mayor had revoked the license before his sudden departure for Battle Creek, Mich., for a conference with U. S. Senator David I. Walsh.

Mankiajewski added that he understood the mayor had revoked the license on the grounds that prizes offered were of more than $5 value as stipulated in the new regulations.

It was understood the mayor had remained adamant despite pleas by the clergy of the church.

The beano game had been conducted by St. Augustine's Church under the auspices of the Ushers' Club, at the school hall on E street.

Sees End of Communism in Europe

That the backbone of Communistic domination in Spain has been broken by recent successes of the so-called Rebel armies and that this will lead to the breakdown of Communistic domination of all Europe, was the declaration of the Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S. J., at Boston College.

"Communism will not be checked by talking about it," Fr. Ahern said. "The only way it can be forestalled is to put into effect the principles of social justice. That was not done in Spain.

"Everywhere Communism has gained a foothold, there has been an unfair system of land ownership. That was the situation in Russia, in Spain, in Mexico and everywhere the Communists have made progress.

"The peasants in these countries owned absolutely nothing while all the land was in possession of the aristocracy, who were for the most part absentee landlords. And there was an middle class, which owned property such as we have here in America.

"Communism in Spain was engineered by Russia. After the success they seemed to expect there; it was to have been spread to France and England.

"The recent Communistic riots in France and England give evidence of their unrest over the defeat of the Communistic forces in Spain."

After stating that the misnamed rebel forces in Spain are really the patriots and those who are fighting for human rights against out and out avowed Communists, the noted Jesuit prophesied continued successes for the forces of General Mola, whom he termed, "one of the greatest generals in Europe."

Landon Eager to Help Youth, Says Mrs. Cutler

By MRS. LESLIE B. CUTLER
Chairman of the London Volunteers of Massachusetts.

One of the encouraging features of the Republican Party's mission campaign of Governor Alfred M. Landon's awakening of the problems of youth in America.

Thousands of young women and young men throughout the country have never been regularly employed. Many of them have been forced to go on relief jobs.

The experience has been disillusioning and humiliating. No one is more keenly sympathetic with these young people than Governor Landon.

He is eager to show them that the misfortunes which have visited them are the catalogue of the economic system with which America has been familiar.

"To these young people are among the saddest victims of the depression," Governor Landon says.

"In my own mind they have a place apart. For the others, they have had jobs at one time or another. They have known what it means to earn their own way.

"To them, the depression has meant hardship and suffering. I know. But to our young people who have never been able to find employment, the depression has meant more than this.

"For these young people it is not sufficient merely to provide food and clothing. We must do more. We must convince them that our form of government has not failed.

"We must prove to them that our economic system still is capable of giving them work at full pay. We must maintain their faith in the eternal value of human liberty."

Women of Massachusetts, particularly the independent and Democratic voters, are urged to visit the London Volunteers at the organization's new headquarters, 24 Province street.

342,365 Voters Registered Here

With 2455 precincts registering yesterday in Greater Boston for the November elections, the count today stood at 342,365 registered voters.

Next Wednesday at 10 p. m. the registration polls in the wards and City Hall annex will close.

With a record-smashing registration for the primaries, officials predict that the November election will bring the largest vote in the city's history to settle some of the most heated and bitter political battles in years.

LLOYD GEORGE discusses AMERICA'S PART in the WORLD WAR

of Britain's War-Time Prime Minister

The famous British statesman, in his memoirs, containing new and frank revelations regarding the World War, bitterly criticizes what he terms "the indecision and bustling incompetency" with which the American army was organized and equipped, but admits it was the presence of the American troops that enabled the Allies to win the war. Look backward at those dramatic days as seen through the eyes of David Lloyd George.

DICTATOR IN COUP SEIZES AUSTRIA, ROUTS PRINCE

there old party loyalties and made them suddenly swear unswerving fealty to the person and principles of Schuschnigg alone.

HOLDS ARMY READY

The Schuschnigg coup was accompanied by emergency orders to the entire Austrian army and Vienna police force to stand by for possible rebellion by the Heimwehr.

The chancellor acted with speed and resolution in the crisis that had been developing in Austria during the last few days. His attack was precipitated by the ultimatum threats by Prince Von Starhemberg to mobilize the Heimwehr.

Early in the evening, preceding last night it is understood, Schuschnigg summoned the Heimwehr leader to the chancellery and there gave him a last-minute effort to effect a truce.

But Prince von Starenberg was immovable. His price for peace was the vice-chancellorship from which Schuschnigg ousted him June 14 and the post of commander of the militia, which would have given Starhemberg control of the armed forces.

SPRINGS HIS COUP

The chancellor thus struck. He made his astounding complete by forcing two members to turn coat. The only two representatives of the Heimwehr on the cabinet, Vice Chancellor Eduard Von Hartsfeld and Foreign Minister Ludwig Draxler, resigned.

But they immediately countered the cabinet through the back door by pledging allegiance in writing to Schuschnigg.

The same procedure was observed in the case of Dr. Hans Pernter, minister of agriculture, who originated the Starhemberg revolt, though Schuschnigg was the founder of the semi-military organization whose chief purpose was to keep Austria independent from Germany.

The chancellor, who controls the police office as a suspected "weakling" and stopping chancellor, showed no fear today when he ordered the police to suppress forthwith any attempts by Prince Von Starhemberg to interfere with the dissolution orders.

His courage was further exhibited when, in spite of the potentially explosive situation in Vienna, he left soon after the cabinet meeting to attend the funeral of Premier Julius Gombrowicz in Budapest.

SUBSTITUTE CONTROLS

As a result Baar-Baarenfels as vice-chancellor is in charge of the government in Vienna, responsible for peace and order, and thus while Schuschnigg is absent in Budapest he will be unable to impose his former Heimwehr colleagues with heavy hand.

The next move is up to Prince von Starhemberg, but Chancellor Schuschnigg holds the whip hand, and it is expected that the Heimwehr leader will bow in the end as he did when ejected from the cabinet.

At that time he made a flying trip to Riccione to confer with the puppet of Premier Mussolini. Fascist aid was then refused, and it is believed that now Il Duce will back up Schuschnigg.

The chancellor has been in office since 1933.

A dependable dissolution order was the second which the chancellor has issued in the last six months.

On May 19 in a radio address he declared the private armies would be absorbed into the national militia and sanctioned a semiofficial announcement the new organization would be the armed force at the disposition of the Austrian "fatherland front," the political organization.

At that time, Von Starhemberg spoke strongly against the abolishment of his Heimwehr and declared:

"All my life I have been a fighter, and Austria will soon see I am not licked now. The real contest is just starting."

Italy, Germany, Portugal Accuse Russia in Crisis

London, Oct. 10 (AP)—Three Fascist nations of Europe accused the Russia of sending illegal aid to Spanish insurgents, were reported considering today a formal protest against the choices to the Moscow government.

Italy, Germany and Portugal pondered the prospective action, informed sources said, as their representatives relaxed after a noisy, tense session of the international committee attempting to isolate the Spanish civil war.

"LIE" HURLED AT RED

During the meeting, Dino Grandi, Premier Mussolini's delegate and ambassador to London, called the Soviet representative a liar, "energetically refuted and repudiated every single point of the allegations made by Maxim Maxim Litvinoff against Italy," and turned the Russian accusations upside down to declare Moscow was assisting the Madrid government.

Francisco Cabeiros of Portugal, who withdrew from the session in raucous assembly, and Prince Otto von Bismarck of Germany in turn derided the allegations made by Moiseyevich Kagan, representing Russia.

Eight hours of heated debate brought these results:

1—Russia decided not to cancel her membership in the international association charged with trying to keep the Spanish conflict on a domestic basis.

2—The committee agreed a Soviet proposal to appoint an investigating commission to determine whether foreign aid were being sent into Spain through Portugal should await receipt of a formal answer from the Lisbon government.

3—Italy, Germany and Portugal were given time to answer complaints of assisting Spanish Fascists which were first laid before the group by the Madrid government and, because of the time element, took precedence over almost identical later Russian charges.

4—The committee voted to put Madrid's accusations against the three nations "to the most searching examination" which "should be carried through with the greatest possible speed."

The speed at which the Italian representative heated language was described as "without parallel in subsequent diplomatic exchanges" adjourned last night without setting the date for its next meeting.

Hitler Doubles Rhine Army in Red Crisis

Strasbourg, France, Oct. 10 (AP)—France's Communist party, yielding to stiff government dictates, put its scheduled week-end mass meetings in Alsace-Lorraine to ten today, but the concession failed to end a state of feverish tension in the closely-guarded "lost provinces."

With unconfirmed reports stalking German frontier guards, in some sections, had been doubled; with scores of squadrons of French cavalry and mobile guards pouring into the area, with rumors of marching peasants and a threatened Rightist plan to break up even the ten "authorized" Communist meetings, general apprehension ran higher hourly.

The first test comes tonight when Communist meetings, authorized by the government, are scheduled for Metz, Wahlkambach and Boofzheim.

Reports reaching authorities here that Adolf Hitler's black-clad "Death Staffel" men, had reinforced the German frontier guard were followed by word from Metz that the Lorraine guard on the German side had been doubled.

Embattled Rightists, peasants and Catholics joined a determined move to keep their political foes from even reaching the ten authorized meeting places.

Rebels Cut Madrid's Last Rail Line to Sea

Burgos, Spain, Oct. 10 (AP)—Insurgent bombardment of Aranjuez, important communications center 30 miles southeast of Madrid, has cut the only remaining railroad link between the capital and the eastern coast, Fascist officials asserted today. Insurgent bombing planes attacked Aranjuez and the rail line running through it, the high command declared, wreaking great damage on the Madrid-Valencia railroad.

Madrid "Digs In" for Long Rebel Siege

Madrid Oct. 10 (INS)—This city of one million tightened its belt and doused its lights today for one of history's grimmest sieges as rebel forces thrust their deadly trident nearer the capital.

Strict curfew regulations were ordered. All public establishments must be closed at 10 p. m., and nobody except police and officials will be allowed in the streets after 11 p. m.

Hinting at fears of a rebellion within Madrid, the government explained the measures were "to protect the loyal armies' rear." The ministry of agriculture issued a decree appropriating the land of all persons "directly or indirectly implicated" in the revolution.

SALVATIONISTS WILL OCCUPY 60 PULPITS

Salvation Army Day will be signalized tomorrow in the churches of Boston and vicinity. Sixty churches have opened their pulpits to Salvation Army officers who will preach the sermon at either morning or evening services.

Open-air "bombardments" will take place tonight, at 7 o'clock, when Commissioner Alexander M Damon, commander of the forces of the Salvation Army in the eleven states comprising the Eastern Territory, will fark back to the days when he was a youthful lieutenant, just out of Salvation Army Training College. He will conduct services in Bowdoin square.

Other "bombardments," as the Army terms them, will be held at the corner of Washington and Tremont streets, and on Washington street at Dudley.

At 10:30 p. m. Salvation Army forces will converge on Bowdoin square and, under Commissioner Damon, will conduct a final open air "bombardment" there.

Tomorrow, at 2 p. m., a service will be held at the Parker Man Bandstand on the Common, followed by a parade to Tremont Temple, where, at 3 p. m., a public rally will take place, with the visiting officers and members of the Greater Boston Advisory Board on the platform.

Addresses will be made by Commissioner Damon, Rev. Samuel M. Lindsay, D. D., of the Brookline Baptist Church, and State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, a long-time member of the Advisory Board.

Lieutenant-Colonel John J. Allen, news service director, will preach the morning sermon at the Melrose M. E. Church and in the evening will appear at Trinity Church, Newton Centre.

General Edward J. Higgins, former international leader of the Salvation Army, will preach at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul tomorrow morning, and at Trinity Church, Copley Square, in the evening.

'Nellie Bly' Finds Calcutta 'Times Square' of World

Dorothy Kilgallen, the New York Evening Journal's modern Nellie Bly, speeds on today toward Bangkok, Hong Kong, Manila and the China Clipper in her record-breaking race around the world.

Miss Kilgallen, with Leo Kieran, one of her two newspaperwomen rivals, has reached Jodhpur, India, while the third contestant, H. R. Ekins, is in Borneo, enroute to Lam Bounga, Cuba and Manila.

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Calcutta, Oct. 10 (INS)—This is the crossroads—the halfway mark—the "Times Square" of travel from the Occident to the Orient.

We roared into Calcutta aboard our Imperial Airways liner at 4 o'clock this afternoon from Jodhpur, via Allahabad and Cawnpore. It was a flight that took us over all the mystery and beauty and sadness that is India.

Calcutta is really the "middle of the world." It's the midway mark for all travel and shipping from Europe to the Far East so I couldn't help but feel we had reached a milestone when we came down on the smooth modern airport whose 20-century atmosphere is in such sharp contrast to the antiquity of the city itself.

MEETS MAHARAJA

From Jodhpur, where no one less than the maharaja himself gave this little girl a hand, we flew first to Delhi. We crossed low mountain ranges where, I was informed, leopards and other not-so-gentle members of the cat family thrive.

I kept my eyes glued to the window in the hope of seeing one. For a playmate, I'd rather have my own little white angora "cotton," out home in Brooklyn waiting for me, but a leopard on the loose would be rather nice to see—from a distance.

OVER JUNGLE COUNTRY

One of the sights of the trip was the Salt Lake of Sambhar, but outside of that it was mostly mountain ranges, then deserts, then matted jungle country.

We had little time for sightseeing at the various stops enroute, but there may be some time to spare in Calcutta. When I make up this dispatch is safely under way I'm going to take a look at this historic metropolis and its famous Fort William—site of the "Black Hole"—all of us read about in our schoolbooks.

Ekins at Manila. 5000 Miles in Lead

Manila, P. I., Oct. 10 (AP)—H. R. Ekins, one of the newspaper reporters racing around the world by establishing means of transportation, arrived in Manila at 5:55 p. m. today, far ahead of his two competitors.

Bad weather which accompanied him all the way on his flight from Borneo may help speed him back to New York. The possibility arose that he would board the Philippine Clipper at Dawn Sunday for the transatlantic flight instead of waiting for the China Clipper flight next week, as he planned.

The Philippine Clipper has been delayed here two days by a typhoon.

Ekins was about 5000 miles ahead of Dorothy Kilgallen and Leo Kieran, who left New York with him on the Graf Zeppelin to start the world-girdling race.

have vanished. Men becoming civilized will not want to live packed together, they will demand room and height, to see and work. Airplanes will provide that, and every mountain and tall hill top will be inhabited. The future city will be one big store or factory, customers and workers landing on the roof, going down to shop or work, flying back to the heights.

"It hath not yet been shewn what we shall be," is putting it mildly. The primitive conqueror ruled on earth with his club, splitting enemy's skull. The great conqueror to come will live in the stratosphere, dictating orders to the world, enforcing them with fleets of planes, coming to earth occasionally, perhaps, to see that his orders are obeyed.

The real dictator is yet to come.

Miss Barbara Field, descendant of the great Chicago merchant, Marshall Field, left a little package in the rumble seat of her car when she went to Barnard College. Somebody stole the package with its $30,000 worth of jewelry, including diamonds and pearls.

That would interest old Marshall Field, although the $30,000 means nothing to the charming Miss Barbara, for $30,000 is more than a hundred times as much as old Marshall Field had, when he stood behind his first little stand selling goods on the sidewalks of Chicago. He was proud of those days, used to tell about playing poker with Judge Gresham, John W. Doane, Port Collector Clark and George M. Pullman, in Pullman's fine house on Prairie avenue.

The greatest, most important thing in the world is ACTION. Almost anybody can have a good idea, but one in a thousand can carry it out. Goethe says well, at the beginning of "Faust," "In anfang war die tat," "in the beginning was the deed," or action.

Nations flounder because they are slow to act; dictators thrive and rule because, with them thought and action are simultaneous. Hitler marched to the Rhine, wiping out the impossible Versailles treaty,—France and other nations went to Geneva to talk about it. Had Clemenceau been alive, and in power, the moment Hitler moved, every French plane would have been sent to meet him, and argue from above. The matter would have been settled, one way or the other.

Mussolini holds Ethiopia, because while Mr. Eden of England and "statesmen" of fifty-one other nations were talking about stopping him, Mussolini was going ahead.—ACTION.

A moving picture, or a new chapter in history starts when the word "ACTION" is heard. Young Americans who want to "arrive" somewhere should remember that it is not what we think, dream or plan, but what we DO that counts.

Spanish insurgents, fighting the Madrid government, convinced that they are fighting for all civilization as well as for the restoration of the church and the old order in Spain, denounce "rich Spanish slackers" that left their country, taking no part in the insurrection "to fight their country's battles in the cocktail trenches of Biarritz and St. Jean De Luz."

That attitude is not new, for wealth, in its stupidity, is intelligent, or at least cunning, and prefers safety, as a rule. It was true that the richest man in Rome went with Caesar to fight and gather glory, but was soon killed off. In our Civil War, when it was difficult to secure soldiers in New York, and the inmates of a Negro orphan asylum were murdered in protest against conscription, the conscripts called it "a rich man's war and a poor man's fight."

MUSSOLINI WAR PLANS

Orders $7,000,000 for Armaments

Rome, Oct 10 (INS)—Italy forged to the front in Europe's armament race today when Premier Mussolini ordered construction of military airports at strategic points, established new naval units and commanded "intensification of Italy's entire military might."

At Il Duce's orders, the Fascist council of ministers approved expenditure of 140,000,000 lira (approximately $7,000,000) for military air fields to be constructed in the Po valley, Sardinia, and Sicily as well as along Italy's vulnerable coastlines.

In addition Il Duce by royal decree created a special council of air experts to hasten Italy's preparations for aerial warfare and, it was learned authoritatively to study ways and means of making Italy supreme in the air.

Personnel of the air force will be increased, the council decided, factories producing supplies for the air force and navy were ordered to increase the hours of work to a maximum of sixty hours weekly.

In presenting his demands to the council, Mussolini declared airplane production is not yet great enough and behind schedule, but he termed the daily quota fixed by manufacturers as "highly satisfactory." In order to speed up production, he designated a number of factories which in the future will produce airplane engines exclusively.

Dealing with the naval situation, the council ordered the number of men working in shipyards brought up to a total of 60,000 to speed work on naval units under construction.

Italy Begins Work on Largest Army Airport

Jesi, Italy, Oct. 10 (AP)—Undersecretary for Air General Giuseppe Valle gave the signal today for the start of work on what will be one of the largest military airports in the world.

It will engage about 1000 workmen for more than a year. When completed it will have a capacity for nearly 200 airplanes and 1000 aviators. It is 20 miles from the Adriatic coast at Ancona.

Military circles say it has Yugoslavia particularly in view.

"You are frightened," Thiele explained, showing how with his face. "This other native—he tell you the tiger is loose. You screw up the face! Like this! You make the eyes wide! You open the mouth! You gasp!

The "native" listened passively to his instructions. Then he asked: "What do you want for five bucks—Barrymore?"

Once Over Lightly:

Lou Smith, general manager of Rockingham, and Russ Murray, general manager of the Revere dog track, will be partners this winter in general sports promotion, including fights, in Boston . . . Smith was the premier fight promoter of the Canadian Northwest for years. He staged the bout between Phil Schlossberg and Vic McLaglen. The bout was McLaglen a tin ear and a smushed nose. That Allen Man Again:

The Fred Allen all-Boston amateur hour was featured by two typically convulsing Allen retorts. Talking with one of his proteges about New York buildings, Fred agreed that the New York spires are over-rated. "Bunker Hill monument comes to the point much quicker than the Empire State building," Mr. Allen averred . . . He asked one of the amateurs, who hailed from South Boston, if the lad knew "Hambone" Kelly. The youngster said he didn't.

"Well," explained Fred, "Hambone's only social drawback was his name. Many of his good, pious friends in South Boston wouldn't speak to 'Hambone' on Fridays."

Chatter:

Leo Kabatznick, who has turned to auctioneering, will offer the contents of Eddie Cantor's Central Park West apartment at a gallery sale in New York next week . . . The Cantors are going to live in the Pantheon again, permanently . . . A portfolio of "Pop-Eye the Sailor," with 25 original songs, is in manuscript and ready for the presses . . . And they are calling the stage premieres in New York "Hopenings" . . . That will be Fulton Oursler, her famous husband, with her . . .

A Good Guy Takes to the Trail:

Paul Whelton's farewell dinner at Berascha's last night found a lot of hard-boiled fellows choking over their steak and spaghetti. Jean Sargent, the talented star of The Penthouse show, "Autumn Days," sang in her perfect fashion, and Carl Moore and Billy Payne played and sang together. Joe Kelly, who covers the E. Cambridge courthouse, strummed out rhythmic accompaniment on a ukulele to the swing of his voice. Ben Gershon and Harry Barnett played the piano and Newcomb (N. F. T.) Thompson danced. The party was hilarious. Several of the boys, taking time out from coverage of the "Merry Widow" murder case, slapped Paul on the back and returned to the hunt . . . Yes, the party was hilarious. 'Dodsworth' Film Superb Portrayal

Walter Huston, one of the great character actors of stage and screen, lives again at Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters this week as Dodsworth—Sam Dodsworth, the leading citizen of Zenith, Ohio, the part Mr. Huston created on the stage.

The play is not merely "based" on the famous book of Sinclair Lewis. It is a faithful portrayal and a sincere interpretation of the homely story of small-town America, thanks not only to Producer Sam Goldwyn and Director Bill Wyler, but also to the depth and sincerity and acting genius of Huston.

Huston is surrounded by a tremendous cast, but he dominates the screen, even against the deft competition which Ruth Chatterton and Mary Astor, among others, provide.

While the picture unveils its course to the dramatic climax, one is certain that here is Sam Dodsworth in the living flesh, as Sinclair Lewis pictured him in his mind. It is a forthright, clean-cut performance by a truly great actor.

Sam Dodsworth is a retired automobile manufacturer, whose wealth is an ever-present source of wonder to him, and Ruth Chatterton is his weak, shallow, selfish wife, Fran, who traipses to London and Paris and gads to Vienna in search of romance.

She finds her romance with several artful young men, who ultimately dash off in search of other conquests, and then she returns to faithful, dependable Sam.

Miss Chatterton, too, gives an outstanding performance. She is cast as a wilful, selfish woman, and never once does she appear as anything else. She never makes an appeal to the audience that possibly she is misunderstood. She never asks them to leave the theater thinking kind thoughts. Her dramatic integrity will not allow it, and through the entire production, she is what Sinclair Lewis intended her to be—weak and shallow and hollow.

Mary Astor, in her brief scene as Edith Cortright, also gives a captivating performance, and the Lotharios who loved and left Fran Dodsworth (Chatterton) were David Niven, Paul Lucas and Gregory Gaye.

"Secrets Enemy" is the companion picture, a story of two young men who fall into the clutches of the mobsters, Robert Young, Florence Rice, Joseph Calleia, Lewis Stone and Nat Pendleton, who wrecked havoc for Paul Bowser a few years back, are the starring members of the cast. H. M.

Revues Hold Met's Stage, Screen

By HARRIS MORGAN

A revue double-header features the new program at the Metropolitan Thater this week.

One revue is on the screen—"Big Broadcast of 1937"—and the other is on the stage—Dave Apollon and his 1937 Revue. Apparently we are tearing towards 1937 on all eight cylinders, and it is hoped that the coming year will be as pleasant as the revues which presage it.

Stars of the "Big Broadcast of 1937" are the cool Jack Benny, who jokes with all his suave assurance; George Burns and his simple Suzie, Gracie Allen; the master of the bazookus, Bob Burns, who has made both the bazookus and his home town of Van Beuren famous; Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Ray Milland, and the quite different orchestras of Benny Goodman and Leopold Stokowski.

The picture is the merriest musical in many months, and the presentation is aided and abetted by the new microphonic sound system.

The plot is just a peg on which to hang Benny, Burns and Allen, Burns, and the rest. Benny is the broadcasting boss. Ray Milland is an artist's agent; Gracie the goofy sponsor; Shirley Ross a wise-cracking singer from the hinterlands. There is a race between autos to provide the necessary evil of love interest, and all is gay and giddy.

The young Ross gal steps out to win a starring place for herself, despite the keen competition. She shares the warbling honors with the Raye comedienne. And, too, Eleanor Whitney and Louis DaPron appear in a dance duet.

The stage show presented by Dave Apollon keeps pace with the picture. He has a tropical swing band of his own which is both swingy and tropical.

He has, to his company, a Spanish ventriloquist entitled Wences who is nothing short of colossal.

He has also surrounded himself with such artists, in their special fields, as Sylvia Froos, the deaf-and-dumb dancing team of Charles and Charlotte Lamberton, Johnny Barnes, Yvonne Moray, Eva Lorraine, Harold Adonis, the Gibeons and Johnny Woods.

Clark Gable Offered 'Sea of Grass' Lead

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Oct. 10—Clark Gable will really have to be quintuplets to keep pace with all the announcements of his coming Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. Yet I don't doubt that he would gladly sacrifice a few of the saccharine love dramas planned for him to play in "Sea of Grass," by Conrad Richter, with Spencer Tracy and Jimmy Stewart.

Louella O. Parsons

Yes, it's a horse opry but we won't dare call it that even though it is a glorified Western dealing with Dodge City 50 years ago when bandits ran riot over the Kansas prairie.

This romantic march of Westerns, Cecil DeMille's "Plainsman," the Texas Rangers" and now "Sea of Grass" proves that adventure is still extra tops with our movie fans. To appease that appetite the studios are planning de luxe Westerns instead of the old time Zane Grey variety which for years were money makers for Paramount.

The Gershwin brothers, George and Ira, have joined the parade of musical composers and writers in Hollywood and will shine in at the Samuel Goldwyn Studios January 1. Sam's idea in corralling the Gershwin of "Rhapsody in Blue" fame and his brother, Ira, is to get expert help on a big musical he is planning for next year "The Goldwyn Follies." A girl revue with all the expensive trimmings is Sam's idea, designed, we suppose, to fill in the musical vacancy left by Eddie Cantor's desertion, and to glorify the famous Goldwyn girls.

Warner Brothers are doing better than sitting around waiting about the services of leading men by contracting Gordon Oliver and John Litel, both of the New York stage. Litel, who played the Cagney role in "Ceiling Zero" on Broadway, steps into the lead opposite Ann Dvorak in "Parties After Midnight," which should prove an important picture for both of them considering Ann is making her comeback after such a long screen absence.

Gordon Oliver goes into "Lords of the Land," in which he romances with Jean Muir both on and off the screen, or so we hear. What happened to Jean's ardent romance with Richard Watts, Jr.?

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: If Rosalind Russell isn't feeling her very closest friends she will be married to that mysterious lawyer of hers before the year is out. How she has managed to keep his identity secret all this time is the real mystery to me. The glamorous Russell is vacationing in New York right now. Ten minutes she returns, bride or no bride, she steps into the cast of "Top."

A LINE OR TWO: The new Universal is really trying hard to build up its feminine star roster. Jean Rogers, who won a contest and made her debut in "8 Girls in a Boat" for Charles Rogers a few years ago at Para, has been given a contract at U. and gets the feminine lead opposite Jimmy Dunn in "Murder on the Mississippi." Here's news to excite the kids: Georgie Jessel is looking for a boy about eight or nine who qualifies as an expert bear shooter for a role in "Music in the Park."

Snapshots of Hollywood

Heaven help the smartie who sent MARY BOLAND 20 quarts of ice cream, a piano and a truckload of furniture collect when she ratches up with him. SPENCER TRACY refusing the permanent wave suggested by the studio now has to resort to the curling iron for "Captains Courageous"—but you can bet SPENCE washes that curl out every night before he leaves the lot. VERA MARSH recuperating from an appendectomy at the Cedars of Lebanon. SALLY EILERS sailing every day and every day to HARRY JOE BROWN who is working overtime to pay the wire bill.

COOKING SIMPLIFIED

Modern Kitchen at School

No modern kitchen need to be a secret. So declares Edna M. Ferguson, who will preside over the model kitchen assembly in Hotel Bradford Ballroom when the doors for the four sessions are opened next Tuesday, October 13, under the direction of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser.

The following excerpt from authority on home problems recently had occasion to remind one of her large audiences that the "good old days" were hidden from guests with "good cooks."

The mother emerged in and out of a distant room, a room requiring miles of waste motion, where smudgy iron kettles stood on a refuse fire that melted tin and burned to tempers. The flurried hostess kept the door closed and carefully tried to pretend that the kitchen wasn't there at all.

Not only has the 1936 kitchen had its entire floor lifted, but it is on parade as much as the rest of the house, Miss Ferguson says.

"The closed kitchen door has been thrown wide in proud invitation even in modest homes these days. The attractively styled kitchen is a marvel of labor-saving equipment that simplifies the housewife's work at every turn. In fact, the wonders of the stores ago are the accepted necessities of today."

TALK LOUDLY

Demonstrator equipment, brought from the more modern back world, which Miss Ferguson introduces to the model kitchen, be the eager classes in home-making, who will be welcomed to Hotel Bradford on October 13-14-15-16, features in effort, time, space and actual care will be brought out, as well as the practical labor-saving features of these simplified household servants.

The American-Advertiser Cooking School apparently will be as popular as a convention, for neighborhood delegations are planning to attend six of the four sessions, making the home institute a real party gathering. Most of the prospective guests have questions, too, which will be answered fully from the platform each day.

Joining with the American-Advertiser in presenting the eagerly-awaited Cooking School are a list of enterprising firms and merchants (many of them local), whose names will be carried in these columns during the period of the school. These participants are giving a generous volume of products, which will fill 25 daily gift baskets, presented to pupils attending the free classes.

The Billion Dollar Boys Bosses of the New Deal

In 1929, Frederick William Johnson, commissioner of the general land office of the Interior Department, was city attorney in Rock Springs, Wyo., where he had practiced law for many years.

Today he heads one of the largest bureaus of the Interior Department which supervises such scenes of the public domain, including vacant land subject to public land laws, national forest land so far as mineral and coal leasing law are concerned, reserved mineral resources in stock raising homesteads lands in which entries are not perfected, coal and mineral reserves, and reclamation withdrawals, which cover 750,000,000 acres. Among other things, he supervises millions of acres of homestead entries alone.

He was born in 1881 at Green River, Wyo., and attended the universities of Virginia and Nebraska. His shingle had been out for 18 years in Rock Springs and he was serving as city attorney when President Roosevelt named him for his present post.

In 1932, the year of the last presidential election which many now of importance were giving their views on national problems, The New York Evening Sun's news records do not include mention of his name.

All Society Turns Out to Greet Symphony Orchestra

By BETTY ALDEN

THE FIRST FRIDAY afternoon concert of the new symphony series was held yesterday . . .

The hall was jammed to the doors and all the regular subscribers were expectantly waiting in their accustomed seats by the time Dr. Koussevitsky appeared to take his stand on the conductor's platform . . .

After a short preliminary ceremony in which the conductor and his orchestra beamed appreciatively in acknowledgment of the warm ovation extended by the audience, while flashlight pictures recorded the scene, the first in the season's series of concerts, which so enrich our musical life, began . . .

RENEE SCHANCK

The intermission was like a big family reunion . . . so many socially prominent people had postponed their return to town until the opening date of the symphony . . . and a great many subscribers who came in from Providence, Worcester and other fairly distant places, found old friends to greet as they milled about the crowded foyer . . .

Nancy Wellington, whose engagement to Nicholas Danforth of New York, has just been announced, was kissed and hugged and offered all sorts of best wishes by a number of good friends . . . she looked as radiant as a prospective bride should with a dark oxford gray suit and hat enhancing her blondeness . . . and the little corsage of white roses and bouvardia on her shoulder looked like a miniature bridal bouquet . . .

Mrs. John Wiggins (Jean Lee Sargeant), just back from her honeymoon, wore a snappy sport suit of rust, beige and brown checks with a rust ascot and hat . . . and Louise Whittemore, who was in coral tweed with a matching hat, managed to squeeze through the crowd to have a chat with Mrs. Howard Slayman . . .

You could tell by the flash of enjoyment in Nancy Ames' dark eyes that she was particularly delighted with the beauty of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony . . . indeed, everyone seemed reluctant to go home after the beauty and richness of the afternoon's program . . .

A list of those present would read like the social register . . . and just a few in particular were Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, Jr., with her attractive sub-deb daughter, Nancy . . . Mrs. Eliot Guild, in an attractive little turban adorned with a stiffened veil . . . Mrs. Alvan Fuller and Mrs. Franklin Dibbs discussing the approaching concert of their violinist friend, Ruth Posselt, which is to take place on November 9 for the benefit of the West Newton Community Service Club . . . The Fullers, the Hobbses, Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair Weeks, Mrs. Henry I. Harriman and Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Hitchens are just a few of the patrons and patronesses for the occasion . . .

Supper Dance at Palmer Home

MR. AND MRS. HAROLD PALMER of Manchester and Grosse Point, Michigan, are giving a supper dance at their Manchester home this evening in honor of their daughter, Marie Therese Palmer, and Renee Van Nydeck Schanck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Schanck of Park avenue, New York and Manchester . . .

Miss Palmer, who is dark and willowy, with bright, sparkling eyes, is wearing silver lame made on Empire lines and will carry an old-fashioned bouquet of gardenias . . . her post deb sister, Winifred, who is also receiving, has chosen a Molyneux model of black velvet with a full skirt and a yellow orchid corsage . . . Mrs. Palmer's gown of black lace will contrast with Mrs. Schanck's wine red satin as they stand together in the receiving line . . . and last, but far from least comes Renee, the other guest of honor, who is wearing ice blue and silver lame with a corsage of white orchids . . . Renee, a petite and very vivacious blonde, was chosen second prettiest girl on the North Shore in the contest at the Casino last summer . . .

Before the dance, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Coolidge and their debutante daughter, Eleanor, will entertain at a large dinner for Miss Schanck and Miss Palmer and the gentlemen selected to usher . . . Maria Bullitt of Philadelphia, Josephine Henry of Andalusia, Pa., and Eleanor Hoguet of New York are all visiting Miss Palmer for the week-end, and out-of-town girls at Mr. and Mrs. Schanck's include Frances Cheney of Stockbridge and New York and Caroline Barry, Joan Long and Virginia Ehret of New York . . . A. J. Drexel Paul, Jr., of Philadelphia, John Rockefeller, Myron Wick, Jr., of Cleveland, Beverly Bogert of New York, William Dearborn and David Mills of Grosse Point, are among the out-of-town men serving as ushers . . .

Eliot-Jameson Ceremony in Virginia

MANY BOSTONIANS are focusing their attention today upon an out-of-town wedding of great social importance . . . It is the wedding in Alexandria, Virginia, of Lois Adelaide Jameson to Thomas Hopkinson Eliot, son of Rev. and Mrs. Samuel A. Eliot of Cambridge . . .

The bride is wearing a Regency model of ivory satin with tiny bows from neck to waist, and a Patou veil falling from a twist of pearls and orange blossoms . . . Her attendants, four of whom are from Boston, are wearing taffeta gowns, two each in shades of rose leaf, copper leaf and autumn leaf . . . and bouquets of white flowers with fronds of ivy trailing to the bottom of their skirts . . .

Elizabeth Morison, Bettina Ripley and Barbara Donald are the local bridesmaids, and Mrs. John Boone of Brookline is the matron of honor . . .

Richard Berresford of New York is the best man and the Boston men on the usher corps include Theodore Eliot, Gerard Reilly, Charles Wyzanski, William Sterling Youngman and Edmund Jackson . . .

Following a reception at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Theodore Horace Jameson, the newlyweds will leave for a wedding trip and plan to reside in Washington, D. C., after November 1 . . .

LANDON SONG CONTEST ENDS IN TWO DAYS

The Landon Song Campaign Contest rolls merrily on its way to a grand finale.

Two more days—the closing time is Monday night at midnight—remain and then the glorious opportunity to cash in on one of those national prizes will no longer present itself.

Today's $10 prize is awarded to Lois L. Sands, 12 Stevenson avenue, Everett. Her winning entry qualifies her for the national awards of $1000 and $5000 and the 25 prizes of $25 each. A jury of nationally known musical and lyrical experts will make the final decision in the distribution of these awards.

So keep sending in your contributions. Just address them to the Landon Song Campaign Editor, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

There's a ringing, swinging challenge sweeping on from coast to coast to coast
To kindle fires of courage in the land we love the most.
There are marching, singing soldiers in our fight for Liberty
And dauntless volunteers to pave new roads in history.
(Refrain)
America! America! There's glory in your might!
We want a change in government, so Landon's in the fight!

—2—

Will you catch the torch that's flung to you, and flash the word of truth
From Maine in California, a clarion call to youth?
To restore the Constitution and replant our fertile plains,
An honest, fearless citizen has pledged to take the reins.

—3—

Will you pledge a new allegiance to a man who knows the fears
Of too long empty pockets and bewildered, jobless years?
Will you signal to the Nation that you'll vote for a square deal
And wear a sunflower in your hat to advertise your zeal?

—4—

There's a singing, ringing chorus surging forward to command,
Campaigning for Alf Landon and the glory of our land.
And to make amends, our man intends to rout Boondoggiers, too—
So, proudly on to victory, then our challenge calls to YOU!

Dog Goes to Boy Winner Monday

On Monday comes the presentation, to some lucky boy or girl member of the Boston Evening American Secret Agent X-9 Club—of the big, white English bulldog to be won merely for naming him and writing a letter.

The bulldog will be a present from the Big Chief of the club to the member suggesting the most appropriate name and writing the best letter giving his or her reasons for liking the English bulldog breed.

Presentation of the dog to the contest winner will be made at the New England Bulldog Club's big 15th annual specialty show in Horticultural Hall, next Monday Columbus Day.

League Plans Course for Debs

Next Thursday afternoon is certain to be red lettered on the engagement pad of each of the season's debutantes, who has received an invitation to tea at the Junior League. For her invitation means she has been elected to provisional membership in the league and only an unforseen and absolutely unavoidable occurence would prevent a deb from putting in her appearance at this meeting which is the first time she may look around and see which of her friends were fortunate enough to "make" the League.

Miss Rachel Warner, president of the Junior League, will address the provisionals on the history of the League, and then they will elect a chairman and vice-chairman of their group. Following this Mrs. John Yerxa will give then a brief talk on what is expected of them during their period of "training" as provisionals, and then tea will be served in the ballroom.

2 Sisters Brides In Roslindale

Two Roslindale sisters became the brides of two Roslindale men today at Holy Trinity Church, Shawmut avenue, South End.

Ursula M. Hasenfuss became the bride of John A. Crotty, assistant instructor at Boston Trade School, and Marguerite R. Hasenfuss was married to John S. MacKenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. McKenzie of Roslindale. The brides are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Hasenfuss of Seymour street, Roslindale.

Rev. George B. Hasenfuss, uncle of the brides, performed the ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass after the marriage.

Ursula had as her attendant her sister, Miss Pauline Hasenfus, as maid of honor, and Francis Crotty, brother of the groom, was the best man. Miss Helen Laffey of Roxbury attended Miss Marguerite as maid of honor and MacKenzie's best man was his brother, James MacKenzie of East Rutherford, N. J. The ushers were Henry Danner of Dorchester and Herbert Lally of Roslindale.

A wedding breakfast and reception followed at Longwood Towers, Brookline.

Mrs. Crotty attended Notre Dame Academy and her sister graduated from Chevervus school. Crotty is a graduate of Boston Trade school and McKenzie graduated from the High school of Commerce.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 121

I SMILED triumphantly as Dicky, after giving me the boys' list of livestock, salvaged from Jim, asked me what about the list of toys which Junior had torn up in a really magnificent gesture of boyish renunciation.

"But I picked up the pieces," I said, "and in the few minutes that are left before dinnertime, I can put them together again."

"Smart lady!" my husband commended, adding doubtfully: "But that list was written both sides of the paper, you know."

"I know. It won't be easy," I said, "but I have those transparent strips, and I'm sure I can manage it."

"Let me help!" he volunteered. "I'd love to have you," I said. "If you'll just clear that table and spread out that piece of heavy brown paper on it, I'll try piecing the torn strips together."

TASK IS FINISHED

With Dicky's aid, the task proved ridiculously easy, and we finished it just as the dinner gong rang.

"Oh! look at Mums!" Junior cried as I entered, then rushed over to me and fingered my flowing sleeve.

"Gee! that's pretty stuff," he said, then added with boyish fervor: "But not as pretty as you are, Mums."

"'At a boy!'" Dickey said with an approving grin. "That's what I just told her. Whose turn is it to hold her chair?"

"It's Rod's," Junior said honestly, but with patient reluctance, for Dicky, by example and adroit precept, has made the boys believe that it is a privilege to draw out my chair and seat me at the table.

A SPECIAL OCCASION

"I'm grooming the lads for the diplomatic service," he often says with a grin, but I share his belief that the niceties of social usage should be made a matter of daily routine with children, so that when they are grown, their "manners" will be as much a part of them as their eyes and hair.

I answered the unconscious appeal in my small son's eyes.

"As this is a special occasion —a sort of farewell dinner—" I said, "don't you think it would be a good idea for both of you boys to seat me?"

They sprang forward with such alacrity that Dicky clapped a hand upon a shoulder of each of them.

"Gently! gently!" he adjured. "She asked you to seat her. The way you're going at her, you'll unseat her, and she'll be on the floor."

They giggled apologetically, but slowed their tempo and eased me into my chair with the care usually bestowed upon a rheumatic great-grandmother of eighty odd, while Dicky seated Katherine and Mary with practiced quickness.

MADGE GOES TO FATHER

I had snatched a word with Katie just before our entrance into the dining room, and she served me with exceedingly small portions of food, while Dicky, Katherine and Mary kept the small boys so occupied that they did not realize I was simply toying with my food and eating practically nothing. They were also undisturbed when I excused myself from dessert upon the plea of not feeling hungry.

"Save it for me, Katie," I said, "I shall be hungry when I've finished the things I have to do."

"Kin we help?" Junior asked loyally.

"Thank you, not now," I said. "Later I shall need both you and Roderick."

"I'm glad you don't need them now," Dicky said, "for I want to give them some tips on casting and trolling."

He gave me a surreptitious wink as he walked with me to the door and held it open for me. And as I went to my room to collect the "lists" and then passed on to my father's room, I knew that the boys were safe from all knowledge of my real "farewell dinner" with my father, whose coming departure we did not wish them to guess.

Ginger Rogers Not To Dance in New Photo Play

By PEGGY DOYLE

Hollywood, Oct. 10—That darling of the dance, Ginger Rogers, is about to break out in a rash of bustles, sailor-hats, high collars—and she won't dance!

"And what's so world-rocking about my not dancing?" Ginger wants to know, with a toss of her blonde head.

"Up until the past three years, I never danced in a picture.

"In 'Young Man of Manhattan,' my first picture which I made six and a half years ago, I had a straight role. I had another straight role in 'Star of Midnight,' in which I co-starred with William Powell. I played a light comedy role in 'In Person' with George Brent, and a more emotional one with Francis Lederer in 'Romance of Manhattan.'

"And so there's really no reason why I shouldn't pause in my mad dervishing and take a little walk on the set for a change without causing speculation and wonderment, is there?"

She thinks Fred Astaire is "swell" and she's "absolutely mad about dancing" but just the same Ginger Rogers says she's never had such a thrill preparing for a picture as for "Mother Carey's Chickens," the Kate Douglas Wiggin best-seller of a a quarter of a century ago.

Share Home

We talked about it in the little apartment in town she and her mother, Mrs. Lela Rogers, share pending the completion of the house the latter is building in Beverly.

Ginger, in black and white shepherd's-check shirt and slacks and with a narrow red-satin ribbon 'round her blonde-with-a-hint-of-titian locks, was looking very schoolgirlish.

"'Mother Carey's Chickens' is going to be something entirely different for me and as Nancy, the eldest daughter of Captain and Mother Carey, I'll have a role I can really get my teeth into," said Ginger, with awful anticipation. "Then, I'm going to have for a director that brilliant Dorothy Arzner, Hollywood's only woman director.

"It will be a costume picture, of course, and my first costume picture. And am I having a time for myself in the wardrobe department choosing costumes for it!

Loves Swimming

"I dote on clothes—in my reel life, that is. I have the grandest time selecting clothes for my various pictures. Once out of the camera's focus, however, I'm completely indifferent about them. I love to shop and very often buy a gown, hang it up in the closet, forget all about it until it's out of style and then, with the perverse practicality that characterizes me, I'll begin to wear it.

Her other loves are swimming in a pool—she just "plays" in the ocean—and reading far into the night.

Just now she's being kept up nights by Lincoln Kirstein's "Dance"; "Gone With the Wind," the book that's a daily sell-out in the Hollywood bookstores; and the "Mother Carey's Chickens" script.

Now that she and Lew Ayres have called it quits, Ginger insists that she's shelving romance for the furtherance of her career indefinitely.

System Works

Those who know her well agree that she exerted every effort to save her marriage. That she was even willing to sink her career if that might aid in keeping the marital bark afloat.

"Suddenly I've become adult. Oh, I don't mean I didn't use to work hard. I did, but without any real thought or planning behind it. I was coasting along.

"I'm now on that's changed. I'm thinking out my work now, putting as much into each role I get as I've got to give. I don't know what's ahead of me and I don't believe in stopping one's self by doping out any set goal. The thing to do if you wish to succeed, it seems to me, is to give the best to the job at hand and let tomorrow take care of itself."

That her success system has merit is indicated by the ambitious plans RKO Radio Pictures is making for the little girl from Independence, Mo., who started making good in a Charleston contest and has been climbing upward ever since.

Born Virginia Rogers, the nickname, "Ginger," was the gift of a baby cousin. The closest she could get to Virginia was Ginger.

It was when Ginger and her mother moved to Fort Worth, Tex., where the latter became drama and society editor of the Fort Worth Record that the little green eyed, red-head first gave signs of the talent that has made her famous.

Later, when Ginger was a student at the Fort Worth Central High School and a "leading lady" in the drama productions, Mrs. Rogers, who had written scenarios for Baby Marie Osborne (now Ginger's stand-in), frequently wrote the school plays. Ginger's first dramatic appearance was in "The Life of St. Dennis," a three-act play which her mother wrote from Texas history. Despite all this activity, however, Ginger says that at that time she never had any desire to go on the stage.

"But now that I'm on my tiptoes, in more ways than one," says Ginger, "I'm directing my destiny and mother's gone back to her own career. She's training young contract players for stage productions on the RKO lot. These productions are photographed as they are enacted. This and her duties as talent scout are keeping mother almost as busy as when I was a human firecracker with a paprika temper always exploding at the wrong time."

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Lazy Mothers Often Hide Behind Pretense of 'Being Modern'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Ultra-modern mothers who do not believe in correcting their children, for fear of destroying their "individuality," should build cages for these young hyenas.

At least, they should do something drastic to keep them away from the neighbors and the neighbors' children.

This is the protest I received today from a reader who signs herself, "Indignant Mother." She tells me about the woman on her block who makes a daily trip to the library to read all the latest books on how to bring up children — scientifically.

She says:

"This woman's children are Public Enemies One, Two and Three in the neighborhood. At lunch time, I suggest their going home, but they tell me Mama is away and there won't be any lunch. And, without a sign of hesitation, they inform me they'd like to stay and have lunch with my children.

"Of course, I feel obliged to invite them. But, always, I regret the effort at kindness. Without fail, they criticize the food, spit it out if they don't like it, and are otherwise destructive to the discipline in which I am trying to rear my own children."

My sympathies are always with those who live near these ultra-modern mothers, whose children are as destructive and disorganized as savages.

Mother is constantly seeking new ideas and fads. She is bringing out the "individuality" in John. Mary, she would have you know, has the making of a second Carrie Nation or Florence Nightingale. And a close look might do irreparable damage to her precious personality.

Yes, Baby Peter could be receiving stern admonitions from future edition of Fred Astaire. His talents baffle imagination.

DISCISED LAZINESS

Nemanne, I say. The fact that some author, for whom I have a better subject, eulogizes emancipated children and calls them the makers of tomorrow does not signify that they will ever be more than third-rate men and women.

Chances are the "nurse is on her day off" or rheumatic insomnia she knows about as much about children as you do about flower arrangements on Mars. It is nothing short of marvelous how folks who have scientific nothing about human nature can turn out fat and fawning two-hundred word books on the subject.

Of course, mothers are more destructive "young heroes" do best believe every word of what they would have you think they believe. Usually their tips to the library in quest of mental psychology and allied information are only excuse to cover up their own laziness and unwillingness to tackle the job of handling children as real, conscientious mothers should.

If mothers were the only ones involved the matter might be dismissed with a smile. But, unfortunately, there is more than mothers concerned. The lives of the children are concerned. And an uncontrolled childhood too often gives way to criminal manhood or womanhood. Then society pays the penalty, as well as the mothers.

USE COMMON SENSE

My advice to all parents is, CONTROL YOUR CHILDREN. Treat them with kindness, but impress upon them early in life that you demand obedience. Train them to make decisions, but give them the realization that whatever decision they make, YOUR decision is the important one.

Though I do not approve of whipping girls and boys on the slightest pretense, I do approve of compelling them, if necessary, to respect the right and to hate the wrong. And you cannot always accomplish that by getting down on your hands and knees and imploring children "to be good for the sake of Mama."

As in every other human endeavor, common sense is the principal ingredient in the successful upbringing of children. The man or woman who thinks he can substitute a rather book for common sense is bargaining for a lot of unhappiness later on in life.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We met for the first time at a mutual friend's wedding. She was standing near me, and our eyes met, and something seemed to happen. I made a gesture with my arm, as if to lead her in the ceremony, and she smiled as if to say she was right with her.

We had a gloriously happy time dancing. She was from out-of-town and was staying with some people in a nearby suburb. I drove her home that day. We parted, and the first thing I knew she was in my arms. With a kiss we parted at first sight. When I saw her again, she was anxiously distant. After that on the eighth or ninth occasion we met.

When she went home I wrote her a letter and asked her to marry me. She replied that she hardly knew me. But I told her gently that evening the remorse of the wedding swept her away. Now what do you make of this?

BENEDICT.

MY DEAR BOY:

Even if it was love at first sight with you, I think you're up to take the girl's word for it that she knew what she was doing, too.

The out-of-door wedding is a pretty ceremony, and I dare say it has a good deal to answer for in the long wake of temporary flashes of infatuation.

There is nothing to do but hide your head. Perhaps the young couple at whose wedding you met may be generous and strange to have you send the gift later. Best wishes.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

A Twenty-Dollar Bill

And Reader's Story of How It Saved Him From Death

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

There are some things that money can't buy, but there are lots more things that you can't buy without money. This is the story of the money a man didn't have and how the lack of it almost cost him his life. And it's the story of a 20-dollar bill and how it came to the rescue of Ignatius Craig, of the Bronx, N. Y. And when I tell you that Brother Craig produced that 20-smacker note at a time when he didn't have 20 bucks in his name—well—that just makes it all the more puzzling. As a matter of fact, it sounds just plain impossible. But here's the story and you can judge for yourself.

For six years, Ignatius Craig owned and operated a grocery store in the Bronx. And in that grocery store, on a bitter cold night in November, 1932, he had the adventure of the 20 bucks he didn't have.

It was late in the evening. The last customer had left the store, and he was getting ready to close up. He stepped out from behind the counter to lock the door, but before he could reach it, two young men walked in. One of them stuck a gun in his side and hissed, "Get into the back room—and if you want to live, don't try any funny stuff."

And he did as he was told. Then, while one of them held the gun on him, the other took the money out of the cash register.

There was only $30 in the register. The second bandit looked at it and cursed. Says Ignatius Craig: "As a rule during the day I would take the money out of the register and hide it in some part of the store, just in case there was a holdup. That day I had paid a $60 grocery bill, so the cash in the register was every cent I had. But the bandits must have known of or suspected my trick of hiding money.

"The fellow outside now came into the back room. He walked over to me, stuck his gun in my side and said:

"'Where is the rest of the dough?' The other fellow pushed his gun in my stomach. 'We'll give you 10 seconds to make up your mind,' he snarled. 'Then if you don't tell us where the rest of the money is, we'll shoot you like a dog.'

"I shall never forget the looks on those thugs' faces. I knew they would make good their threat if I didn't produce more money. But there was no more money in the store. Five seconds ticked by while I stood like a statue, terror-stricken and afraid even to breathe.

"Then the first crook said: 'You won't be the first rat we've shot, either. And don't make any false moves or one of these guns might go off before your time is up.' The clock ticked off a few more precious seconds. Still I held my breath. I was in the worst predicament of my life."

You—Ignatius Craig was in a spot—and well he knew it. If he could only gain a little time! His entire stock at badly that he could hardly get a word out of his mouth, but he tried as best he could to explain why he had so little money in the store.

He even offered to show them the receipted grocery bill he had paid earlier in the day. But all the answer he got was another poke in the ribs from the muzzle of a revolver.

The terror in his heart was too much for him then, and he broke down completely.

"I'm a married man with a wife and kid," he cried. Please—for God's sake—don't shoot me. I'm telling the truth." And the first bandit growled, "We're not interested in your wife and kid, see. We know you've got money here, and you can produce it or it'll be just too bad."

That sounded like a death knell to the helpless captive. How he prayed that a customer would walk in! These men had murder in their hearts, and if he didn't produce money he was done for. Yet he knew there wasn't a dollar in the place.

One of the men said, "I'll count up to three. Then if you don't talk, you'll get plugged." The other one said, "Never mind the counting, Jack. Let's give it to him right now!" And then, suddenly, Ignatius Craig had an idea!

Understand, he knew there was no money in the store. And I know there was no money in that store. Both of us will swear on a stack of Bibles as high as an undertaker's hat. But nevertheless he said, "Wait a minute. I have money. There's a $20 bill hidden under a can of tomatoes on the shelf right back of the cash register."

One fellow nodded to the other. They marched their captive out of the back room and made him point out the can. One of the men lifted the can, picked up the bill beneath it, glanced at it and put it in his pocket.

The thugs pushed him into the back room again, and one of them said: "We ought to shoot him anyway."

But the other one said: "We've wasted too much time already. Leave him alone and let's get going."

Then they pocketed their guns and walked calmly out of the store, apparently satisfied at getting that extra $20 that Ignatius Craig swears to you—and I swear to you—he didn't have!

A call to the police brought no results. The two men were never caught. Ignatius Craig sold his business a short while later, because he was afraid those fellows would come back. You see, all those bandits got was the $30 in the register. Craig told the truth when he said he had no more money.

The $20 bill under the tomato can was a counterfeit—one that he'd been stuck with and wanted to keep separate from the real money in the cash drawer.

"Bad money," he says, "is usually hard luck to the one that gets it—but not always. I'll swear to this day that my life was saved by a counterfeit $20 bill."

The ten-buck bills I'm passing out are no counterfeits. So send me that story of YOURS. Monday Gene Gulas of New Bedford tells how he tried to save a life—and succeeded too well.

HIPOLET "HIP" MONCEWICZ, giant H. C. tackle, holds key to H. C. victory over Dartmouth at Hanover today. So badly off for tackles is Dr. Eddie Anderson, Purple head coach, that he half seriously suggested having rocking chairs for both Moncewicz and Dave Gunn, his other tackle, during practice sessions at Worcester this week. Injury to either early in the game will rob the Purple of two of its most powerful weapons.

Eagle-Temple Game Sure to Draw Football Fans

The large list of Saturday football games has not been sufficient to overshadow interest in the clash between Gil Dobie's Boston College football eleven and "Pop" Warner's Temple College team at Fenway Park on Columbus Day. I consider this one of the outstanding football offerings of the season, and it will probably attract a crowd of 30,000 persons.

Mr. Boston

[illegible]

Dobie knows better than anybody else that he will be judged as a coach on what his football team does against Temple. He came to Boston College at a time when the gridiron game was in a bad slump at the Heights. There were persons close to the athletic councils at Boston College who favored a graduate coach, but those persons in control felt the time was opportune to go out and secure a coach with a national standing. Dobie was the selection.

Tech Harriers Meet Green

Soccer and cross country, major fall sports at M.I.T., swing into action today, with the Beaver hill and dalers visiting Hanover, N. H., to race the Green harriers in the first meeting between the two teams in many years.

Henry Guerke, the Tech coach and manager, and New Era and champion at that distance will be favored to lead the pack in, although the Indians have the better team aggregation.

In the soccer encounter, with Tech's booters facing off against the Bridgewater Normal eleven, the Beavers are the favorites.

Lewis Haney Answers Queries

Landon Will Fulfill

HONEST COMMITMENTS OF

This Administration

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Oct. 10—This week I will undertake to answer inquiries received from Burr Oak, Kan., and Chicago, Ill.

* * *

1.—"If Mr. Landon is elected and he reduces materially the flow of money from the Treasury to the unemployed and poor, can business keep up its present pace?"

Answer: No, it would have to increase its pace and swell to greater prosperity.

Landon has pledged his word to fulfill the honest commitments of the present administration. He will not be able to turn off the spending at once.

The chief points, however, are these: (1) His election will greatly increase our confidence in money, government credit, and the right to earn and keep profits. This will increase business, and give employment to millions. Thus the "relief" bill will be quickly reduced. But the flow of private money for really productive purposes will increase. (2) The waste and graft that now attend the New Deal spending will be thrown out. This will enable the same flow of money to the needy, but allow us to cut the public debt.

2.—"I understand that Republicans hold that business will be boosted by increased private investments. Will it take any less consumer money to pay interest on such investments than it takes now to pay on government borrowings?"

Answer: These points give the answer:

First, interest on private investments must be earned. Unless the plant and equipment involved produce income, no interest can be paid.

But about half of government borrowings are wasted. They are not used to produce revenue. The government can pay interest only by forcing its citizens to pay the taxes.

Second: Since private investment is much more apt ite be productive than government operations, consumers are much more likely to get their money's worth when they pay interest required to reward capital.

Third: Consumers will have more capacity to pay when employed productively in private industry. They then have to earn their income, and they can do so by rendering services that others want and can afford to pay for. (Boondoggling does not go.)

* * *

3.—"Do the dollars saved in insurance policies and savings banks have as much purchasing power today as they did when they were originally saved?"

Answer: In general, I would say no, although this depends on when the money was put in.

Certainly prices are higher and money will buy less on the average now than at any time between 1930 and 1935. Certainly the same is true of the period before 1916.

For example, if you could buy gold you would now find that a dollar will buy only 13.7 grains, against 23.22 grains prior to 1934.

The most serious point is that we have no basis for confidence that the purchasing power of dollars will not continue to decline as it has since 1933. In fact, if we go back to the gold standard, prices will have to rise sharply, which is the same thing as a sharp decline in what dollars will buy.

4.—"Does the relatively large quantity of money in circulation, at the time when the velocity of bank deposits is low, indicate the existence of hoarding in this country?"

Answer: Probably the artificially low interest rates forced by New Deal financial manipulation cause some people to hold currency in one way or another. They can get no interest and they are so uncertain about what the New Deal will do next that they do not invest. Thus their money does not actually circulate, although it is outside the Treasury.

This is like "hoarding" in some ways but, on the whole, is a different matter. The motive is not a fear of the banks or a hope of avoiding deflation.

COTTON

Gray Cloths ACTIVE

SALES VOLUME LOWER

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—Cotton gray cloths again were active and advancing this week, although the volume of sales was sharply lower than the record activity of the previous week.

Sales of print cloth were 25 to 50 per cent in excess of production, and nearby deliveries brought sharp premiums as it became increasingly difficult to buy shipments within the year on many important construc-tions.

Broadcloths were similarly well sold ahead and premiums were paid for deliveries within the year. Sheetings were strong and active. Fine yarn gray goods were higher and sold in good amounts.

Mill operations were not changed. Most mills were running at two-shift capacity and indications are heavy operations will continue through the end of the year, based on orders already in hand. Unfilled orders are at the highest figure in many years and are estimated at more than three months of current production.

New prices were made on percales for spring to the jobbing trade which were about equal to the levels in force on the "fall-end" fall repeat business. Advances are considered likely to develop within a week. Other finished goods such as bleached muslins and printed broadcloths are higher in sympathy of recent advances in gray cloths.

Colored yarn fabrics strong, with a tendency to advance. The list on woven tickings was up and denims tended higher. Chambrays and coverts also were on a higher basis, sheets and pillow cases were unchanged.

Rayon gray cloths were generally quiet and unchanged. A downward adjustment of prices on some acetate yarns was announced and brought confusion to the dress goods markets, where goods were backing up in the hands of converters and garment manufacturers. Silk fabrics were sold in good volume at strong prices.

Prints quoted in primary cotton cloth markets were: Print cloths, 28 inch 64x60s, 4¼ cents; 28½ inch 64x60s, 6¼ cents, brown sheetings, southern standards, 9½ cents; tickings, 32 inch, 8 oz., 16¼ cents; denims, 28 inch 2.20s, 13½ cents; staple ginghams, 9 cents.

ROAD

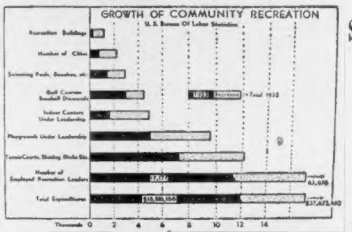
Improvements NEEDED

The New England Road Builders Association, through its secretary, Frederick Hoitt, reports that the annual toll of highway accidents is over 35,000 persons killed, 1,000,000 injured, and over a million automobiles damaged. The problem is a serious one, and there are many contributing factors to this mounting highway accident record.

The highways themselves are responsible for many accidents, inasmuch as road systems have not been improved in proportion to the improvements made in motor vehicles. The motor car has been improved more rapidly than the road and control systems over and through which it operates. Many of those who have studied existing highway conditions believe that all main routes should be of the dividing line design, with middle safety strips, the necessary underpasses, and grade crossing eliminations. Elimination of many existing traffic hazards is now under way in an extensive program of road improvements by the Massachusetts State Department of Public Works.

A number of Pennsylvania's House of Representatives, recently stated that the speeding of gasoline tax revenue for highway improvements would do much to reduce loss of life and property in highway accidents. He also said that the use of the money for other purposes has produced results already apparent to anyone who travels Pennsylvania's highways. Throughout New England every day newspapers report fatal motor accidents caused by dangerous road conditions.

Recreative Movement



The rapid development of the community recreation movement during the past few years has been due almost entirely to the depression.

Cities and communities in an effort to promote employment subscribed whole-heartedly to the movement.

Development and maintenance of recreation facilities is financed almost wholly from "emergency funds." Part of the funds were raised by cities through taxation and private gifts, while the rest was made available by federal and state funds.

The movement not only provided employment for many, but the recreational facilities offered a diversified field of activity in music, art, drama, athletics, as well as arts and crafts training centers.

Last year more than 41,000,000 persons attended or participated in programs carried on in recreational buildings. Total attendance of participants and spectators at playgrounds in 578 cities was over 231,000,000 persons.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Oct. 10—Debts owed to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by numerous railroads has raised the question as to whether or not these transportation companies are subject to the tax on undistributed profits.

The matter is of unusual importance to stockholders of the carriers in view of the fact that many of the loan agreements stipulate that no dividends will be paid on outstanding shares until the debts to the government agency are liquidated. In view of this condition, speculation naturally arises as to how the carriers stand on the undistributed profits tax angle. There has been no official ruling covering this point but one is understood to be pending. The Bureau of Internal Revenue, however, is reported to have reassured counsel for certain roads that it does not intend to force payment of undistributed profits tax on roads which find themselves in this dilemma.

Situation Bars Early Dividends

Discussing the prohibition against dividends in the case of carriers in debt to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Stock Exchange firm of Weingarten & Co. stated: "Stockholders, accordingly, will have to reconcile themselves to delayed dividend payments, it would seem, until these Reconstruction Finance Corporation debts are liquidated. In some cases they will be liquidated out of operating income, by new financing, or both. But there is the satisfaction of knowing that in the meantime, in the aggregate, these roads will not be compelled to pay taxes on their undistributed income, undistributed, among other reasons, because their contract with the Government prevents distribution."

N. & N. W. Dividend Adjusting Seen

Norfolk & Western Railway another profitable coal carrier, is a road which shortly will have to work out a dividend paying problem if it is to avoid heavy undistributed profits tax liability, and at the same time keep a portion of 1936 earnings in the company. Wall street points out. As in 1934, the N. & W. this year has declared one extra of $2 on common, which with the $8 regular annual dividends, will put 1936 common dividends at $10 if no change in the rate is made. Norfolk & Western probable earnings for 1936 have been estimated at around $22 a share, which would compare with $17.37 in 1935 and $14.77 in 1934. For the first eight months of this year, N. & W. earnings equalled $13.43 a common share, against $9.38 in the like 1935 period.

Surplus Profits Tax, An Advertising Boon

Among all the unfavorable comment on the Federal tax on undistributed profits, one comment-tor points out that various forms of advertising are deriving benefits from it. Expenditures for that purpose to increase goodwill is an avenue of partial escape from this burden, although as does not overlook the fact that business survey "is, of course, the main factor in advertising outlay." By way of supporting the contention that the new tax will stimulate advertising the experience of the years 1918 to 1920, when the excess profits tax was in force, are cited. As a result of the subsequent repeal of that act the flow of advertising was flattened considerably.

Excess Reserves Up $110,000,000

Swelled by heavy gold imports, excess reserves of member banks in the Federal Reserve System increased $110,000,000 the week ended October 7 to $1,850,000,000 or slightly under the record figure since reserve requirements were raised.

Member banks in New York City reported a $16,000,000 increase in "other" loans, chiefly commercial, following a $48,000,000 gain the previous week. Brokers' loans, however, dropped $18,000,000 in New York, while gaining $3,000,000 outside.

The inflow of gold, chiefly from France and England, was $126,000,000, increasing gold stocks to $10,971,000,000, the highest in history. Treasury disbursements reached $139,000,000.

Offsetting these factors were a $39,000,000 increase in money in circulation, a $38,000,000 increase in non-member deposits, a $2,000,000 increase in Treasury currency and a $1,000,000 decrease in reserve bank credit. Member bank reserve balances are now $8,479,000,000.

"Extra" Dividend

International Cigar Machinery Company declared an extra dividend of 5c cents and a dividend of 50 cents, both payable November 2 to stock of record October 17. The company paid 45 cents quarterly previously.

Brown Company Gains Reported

In a letter to holders of Brown Company's first mortgage 5½ per cent bonds, the bondholders' protective committee, of which Charles Francis Adams is chairman, calls attention to certain favorable developments in the position of the company.

These include a contract for the sale of a largely increased tonnage of spruce pulp for export to Japan in 1937; arrangements with Commercial Credit Corporation to take over on favorable terms the loan on inventories originally made by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston; and the purchase of the bonds put of the Port Royal Pulp & Paper Co., Ltd., mill at St. John, N. B., under an agreement expected to show moderate profits from commissions and patent royalties.

A consolidated income statement included with the committee's letter shows that for the 40 weeks ended September 5, net was increased by more than $1,000,000, or 8 per cent, over the corresponding period of the previous year.

The statement indicates profit after current interest but before depreciation, depletion and charges deferred during the pending bankruptcy proceedings, of $683,088. This is an increase of $447,226 over that shown in the same 40 weeks of the previous year.

HEAVY Stock Market VOLUME

IN PAST WEEK

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service Financial Editor

New York, Oct. 10 — This week has witnessed a return of near boom conditions in the stock market — new highs for the last five years—ticker late six trading days in a row—volume the heaviest in months, with one three million share session.

The actual gain on the week, though, has not been large, considering the volume. Industrial averages are up from last Saturday less than 3 points—2.75 to be exact.

The reason for this is the heavy profit-taking that the market has been called upon to absorb all week. This has been accomplished under the cover of a rotation of leadership.

While the market has absorbed the profit-taking in good style, the rotation of leadership is not always a healthy sign. For that reason caution is warranted here.

The prevailing thought in the financial district at the moment is that the market has discounted the election next month. Certainly interest downtown is lagging in the contest, but this may only be a "seventh inning stretch."

But more important is the growing conviction that come what may this November business and the stock markets are off on a major upward swing that will develop in the year or two into a full-sized boom.

Everything points to an excellent fall business this year. Steel mills and electrical equipment plants are booked way ahead and the automobile industry is just swinging into the full production of new models.

Freight car loadings are at the highest point for the year. Steel production is holding right around the year's best levels. Power output is breaking all records.

To get back to this week's market, the daily progress, except on one day—Tuesday—has been very gradual. On Monday the industrial averages closed up only 37 cents, Tuesday $1.61, Wednesday 34 cents and Friday 26 cents.

Features of the trading have been the coming to life of the utilities and oils and new highs for the steels. Other groups, such as the motor, coppey and merchandising, were strong, while the aviations have been weak. The last tumbled on a poor earnings report by Douglas.

The following table shows the range on the week of the leading stock and bond averages, with last night's closing price and the net change from last Saturday:

INDUSTRIAL STOCKS
High	Low	Close	Net Chg
176.45	171.24	175.19	Plus 2.75
RAILROAD STOCKS
59.53	57.49	59.03	Plus 1.38
UTILITY STOCKS
35.66	34.56	35.20	Plus 0.29
40 BONDS
105.52	105.34	105.52	Plus 0.12

Industrial stocks are now the highest since March, 1931, when they had a range of 177.72-176.36. The railroads go back to September of that year, when they had a range in the price average of 68.52-53.08. Utilities were higher in 1933.

Aroostook R. R. Issue Approved

Stockholders of Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, at a special meeting, voted to authorize offering of $3,420,000 new 5 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock, of which far, proceeds to be used to redeem, as also authorized by stockholders, $3,480,000 7 per cent preferred at $110 per share.

Stockholders also authorized issuance of 68,352 additional shares of the par common, which, with 8268 shares previously authorized, would be available for conversion of new preferred. Each new share of preferred will be convertible into two shares of common stock up to July 1, 1941, on payment of $75, thereafter to July 1, 1946, on payment of $90, and thereafter on payment of $120.

Wall Street Hears

New York, Oct. 10 (INS)—That White Motors, (WHI), should earn well over $1 a share this year, against a loss of close to $3,000,000 in 1935.

That maintenance of the General Cigar (GYGL), $4 common dividend is assured.

That Studebaker (STU), is likely to report a small loss for the third quarter, due to curtailed output.

COMMODITY MARKETS

Extremely Quiet in Past Week

By EDWARD KRICKER
International News Service Financial Writer

New York, Oct. 10 (INS)—Despite issuance of government estimates on the major crops, commodity markets were extremely quiet in the past week with sharp advances in cocoa, coffee and sugar featuring an otherwise dull list.

Renewed cocoa buying by manufacturers sent futures over the 8-cent-a-pound mark for the first time in six years on gains ranging to almost 40 points.

Completely reversing prior trends the coffee market improved every session this week, climbing more than 30 points from the all-time lows set the week before. Surinam coffees have dropped to so low a level that an export demand spot has developed and the pressure of unwanted grades on the liquidating old New contracts decreased.

Setting of a low Philippine quota and steadied refined prices spurred sugar to gains of almost 10 points. The Philippine allowance for export in the same as last year, but quotas were raised and the trade feels that the Department of Agriculture will not repeat last year's mistake of raising quotas too early.

A newcomer to futures trading on any basis on the Chicago Board of Trade also did well, opening Monday at 12¾. The market later gained more than 6 cents. Cotton seed improved slightly.

Hedging and a substantial increase in the government crop estimate depressed cotton futures in the early part, but good trading demand to satisfy growing consumer requirements held the decline from assuming more than minor proportions. Grain crop estimates came too late to influence the markets. Wheat was steady and about unchanged, while corn and oat gained.

Coppers, hides, rubber and silk showed virtually no change on the week. Trading was unusually dull.

Big Gains SHOWN BY N.E. States

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

New England department store sales showed a substantial increase in September over a year ago according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston index.

Following the slight relapse in August this is good news for those who feel this index is one of the most sensitive and accurate barometers of recovery's progress.

The actual gain is set at 11 per cent for the month, while the bank sets the improvement for the first nine months of the year at 9.6 per cent. All leading New England states contributed to the gain, with New Hampshire leading for the month and Massachusetts ahead of her sister states for the year to date. The individual feature of the bank's report is the increase of 13.7 per cent shown for Easter last month. . . .

The stock market's performance this week is closely paralleled by the bond market. Industrials are fighting their way out of the one point wide-3 months long rut in what appears to be a well founded move. Utilities are out of their narrow range weeks lasted for weeks in what looks like a promising move. But they cannot afford to let down for very long as they did yesterday. Rails are finding the going quite to their liking. Occasional resting spells are indulged in, but these are not alarming since a good, strong move has taken place since mid-August. All comments, of course, are based on the writer's charts of the Associated Press averages. . . .

Notebook: As an after thought, the behavior of foreign bonds is good. . . . Following a test of their August low the group has turned up and is now displaying strength through the September high which suggests that we can probably expect fairly settled conditions abroad. . . . Anaconda only needs to make that 42 market to get going in good style. . . . Just touching it on volume would be enough to start it moving in a convincing fashion. . . . Crown Cork & Seal may earn between $ and $5.50 a share this year. . . . And say an extra of $5 per share. The last from the proceeds of its sale of Detroit Gasket. . . .

The action of the market toward the close of the week, as well as all store results thus far, would seem to say that stocks, however, will continue to rise for the present, a chance of important distribution, and we will be alert as previously stated. Such probabilities are that traders anxious to go home for the long week-end with a clean slate are responsible for the fevered price movement, as their selling orders crossed the buying requests at new-born bulls. . . . Utilities are the one set of stocks that we feel anxious about. As we do not care to see the big purchases of early week flooding back into the market place. . . .

Bits O'Gossip: Kiamazon stove is doing well . . . The gossips say the company will earn about $4.50 per share this year . . . Consolidated Aircraft's unfilled orders book shows a total of $15,-344,444 right now they tell us . . . Menasco's Moline preferred is expected to show around $5 per share earned for the last year . . . Amerada is drilling on Texas & Pacific's property and is expected to bring in a well turned month . . . American & Foreign Power is expected to refund present bank loans of around $26,-000,000 . . . If so it seems safe to look for savings of around 25 cents per share on the first preferred. . . .

PACKARD SALES Set Record

All records for sales, shipments and deliveries of new cars to purchasers for the entire history of the Packard Motor Car Co. were broken during September, it was announced by President MacAuley.

With a bank of 11,335 unfilled orders for mid-August at the company's factories, Mr. MacAuley said that production schedules have been increased substantially the last few days. Production now calls for 1,500 additional cars per week, an additional 12 and super eight cars a month, a total of 1700 cars per month.

In many parts of the plant work is being carried on 24 hours a day. Construction is being pushed on four giant presses for the body stamping division and on other manufacturing equipment which will make possible further and larger increases in production.

ZINC STOCKS Decrease

Stocks of prime western zinc at the close of September totaled 54,-198 tons, against 57,766 at the end of August and 52,832 at the close of September, 1935, according to the Prime Western Zinc Producers committee.

Shipments of prime western in September totaled 32,804 tons, against 30,410 in the previous month and 22,016 in September, 1935.

Production of prime western last month amounted to 19,338 tons, against 18,812 in August and 18,149 in September a year ago.

Wasteful Spending Final Issue of Campaign

THE FINAL MONTH of the presidential campaign finds the decisive debate centered upon the fundamental issue of WASTEFUL SPENDING OF THE PEOPLE'S MONEY.

The campaign started on this issue, and will finish on it.

The New Deal has run down all the blind alleys of political subterfuge and evasion, only to confront the inescapable fact of its own profligacy at every turn.

The New Deal stands convicted BY ITS OWN RECORD of these harmful acts against the people of the United States:

It has taxed them beyond the limit of their ability to pay, with resultant unemployment and stoppage of industry.

It has imposed shocking burdens of debt upon this and future generations, with impairment of credit of both government and employing industries.

It has spent vast sums of money, not in the public interest, but in the building of political power intended to challenge the authority of the American people over their own destiny.

THE ROOSEVELT ADMINISTRATION IS NOW ABOUT TO BE JUDGED BY THE PEOPLE IT HAS HARMED.

THE New Deal has not wanted the people to know the facts about its cost and its political spending.

It has utilized every device of political deception to keep these facts from them.

It has tried to make the people believe they received only the benefits of taxation without sharing the burden.

It has sought to becloud their understanding of inexorable economic truths with irrelevant idealisms.

It has not hesitated to resort to incitation of dangerous passions, blind prejudices and unreasoning class distinctions designed to poison the minds of some of the people against others.

BUT THE PROBLEMS OF EXISTENCE ARE TOO INSISTENT TO BE HIDDEN BEHIND UNREALITIES.

The people are intelligent enough to know what New Deal taxes are doing to them, to their jobs and to their homes.

WAGE EARNERS and tax payers in every community know how the New Deal is spending THEIR money, supporting the hordes of political parasites and jobholders swarming in their midst.

They see the net results of RUINOUS TAXATION AND IRRESPONSIBLE SPENDING in the overwhelming evidence of waste and inefficiency, as contrasted to the pittance of relief dribbling into the hands of the distressed.

There can be only one verdict returned in the light of the facts the people of America have determined for themselves.

The New Deal, CONCEIVED IN ERROR AND COMMITTED TO THE PERPETUATION OF ITS MISTAKES, must be refused renewal of the mandate of public confidence it has betrayed.

Teaching Good Citizenship

ANNOUNCEMENT of a four-year course in "responsible citizenship" as a requirement for a Bachelor's Degree featured the inaugural of Dr. William A. Eddy as president of Hobart and William Smith Colleges.

The purpose of the course, according to Dr. Eddy, will be:

"To prepare graduates for intelligent participation and active leadership in local affairs."

This would be a commendable purpose for ALL AMERICAN COLLEGES.

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about the announcement is its description of a "radical departure" in higher education.

That America is in the second half of its second century as a republic with its schools still viewing a required course in good citizenship as a "radical departure," is both remarkable and recriminatory.

The current evidence in national affairs of pretensions to leadership by irresponsible citizens is the best proof of America's need of the type of education Dr. Eddy envisions.

Rabbi Levi's Observance

RABBI HARRY LEVI, Temple Israel's brilliant pastor, observes the completion of a quarter-century in Boston. And the city, fittingly, celebrates the happy event.

For 25 years, Rabbi Levi has been an influence for good. He initiated the exchange of pulpits with Protestant ministers. He brought the message of his church to Harvard theologians. Always, he was foremost in philanthropic campaigns; always to the front in programs for peace and understanding.

Brightened by the presence of a noted Catholic educator, an Episcopal bishop and a Protestant dean, Rabbi Levi's silver jubilee is important.

Jew and Christian can live and will live together as brothers, sharing brothers' devotion to common ideals.

This, the observance proves.

A Hobby Means Happiness in Your Work

"ABSENCE of occupation is not rest, A mind quite vacant is a mind distressed."—William Cowper.

Simply, completely, John Ruskin has described the perfect life of accomplishment and happiness: "Work first, then rest."

The biography of every successful man will fit that simple formula like a glove. Many young men know how to work hard, but they don't know how to rest. They burn out, crack under the strain, have no sprint left for the final dash to success.

They never learn that real rest does not mean merely stopping work. Read again William Cowper's explanation:

"Absence of occupation is not rest, A mind quite vacant is a mind distressed."

A sport can be a hobby that will make vacations and week-ends a real rest—golf, tennis, stop working; that is a good rule in selecting a riding, hiking, sailing. But the real hobby is one that will occupy your mind and your hands at a task you enjoy while your body rests. A hobby relaxes your mind and your body by keeping both at enjoyable work.

As a meal is incomplete without dessert, so work is incomplete without a hobby.

We can't rest while we are restless, fidgeting, pacing the floor, for want of something to DO.

You are fortunate if you can pick a hobby connected with your work. Most of us can't, and shouldn't. Get away from your work, but don't hobby.

A wise man will pick a hobby that might Some day be a source of revenue. Stamp-collecting is a form of saving money; stamps bought wisely increase in value over a period of years.

Many amateur photographers have become so expert at their hobby that their work attracts wide attention at exhibitions. Such an accomplished amateur can cash in on his hobby as a commercial photographer.

But the greatest value of a hobby is as a "dessert" after hard work. Complete idleness after hard work breeds restlessness; and there can be no rest where there is restlessness.

Pope wrote: "Too much rest itself becomes a pain."

A hobby is the only cure for that pain of restless idleness.

Suppose Somebody Stole Away Every Uniform in Europe; What Would Dictatorships Do?

The big three who run the Nazi Brown Shirts: Chancellor Hitler, decorative General Goering and Marshal Von Blomberg. Would they look so impressive in shorts?

The British musical comedy, "Swing Along," pokes fun at Europe's different "shirt movements." Here you see Comedian Leslie Henson, as a recruit in the "No-Shirts," uniformed supporters of a mythical dictatorship. What would happen to Hitler if all his Brown Shirts suddenly broke out in "Polka-Dots"?

The leader of Italy's Black Shirts, Il Duce Mussolini. He boomed business for tailors. Could he rule without uniforms to Bolster the pride of "Italy reborn"?

American tourists visiting Europe are immediately impressed by the herds of stalwart males who strut about in gaudy uniforms. You know what the brass buttons of a soldier are supposed to do to a young lady's heart. Perhaps that is why young men are so eager to get inside a smartly tailored uniform.

You wonder what would happen to the dictatorships of Europe if some secret, subversive band of pacifists and lovers of human liberties should suddenly and quietly steal away every uniform in Europe. Probably, the dictatorships would collapse like a punctured balloon.

Or suppose that, during a great world war, some mysterious higher intelligence, interested in preserving civilization, should suddenly put the soldiers of opposing armies into the same kind and color of uniforms. What would happen to the fierce hate that dictators and warbreeders had fanned in the brains of unthinking soldiers once they were actually unable to recognize their enemies by the color of their uniforms?

Most dictatorships and most bloody wars hang on a very slim thread—the thread that holds up the uniforms, the symbols of authority and hate.

If we are correct in assuming that uniforms make the dictator, then Billy Minsky is the man to return democracy to Europe.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

When everything else about the Spanish Revolution is forgotten, save the fact that there was a revolution, the Alcasar will be remembered. That is the way with sieges. They making living vital history. They stand out in glowing colors, to be painted by the masters of both the pen and brush.

It took a Homer to describe the siege of Troy. "Remember the Alamo!" was the cry by which an empire was wrested from Mexico. "Remember the Alcazar!" is not unlikely to be the cry which shall decide the destiny of Spain for years to come.

I believe that we all lived in spirit in old Toledo during the 70 days of the siege. We may have favored one side or the other. Our spirits may have been within the old walls and suffering there with the heroic 1800; our spirits may have been outside the walls helping to send 10,000 screaming shells against the living rock on the hill.

The siege of the Alamo lasted 13 days. The siege of the Alcazar lasted 71 days. At the Alamo it was a case of 150 Texans against 4000 regulars of the army of Santa Anna. On the 23d of February, 1836, the little band led by Colonel B. Travis, James Bowie and Davy Crockett began its last stand in the old Mission San Antonio de Valero, called the "Alamo" from the Spanish word for cottonwood, in a grove of which it stood.

They fought until the sixth of March, until a breach had been made in the walls, until their ammunition had run out. And then they died, the survivors of this conflict, in a massacre ordered by Santa Ana.

SAME OLD SPAIN?

I would have preferred the Alcazar to remain as the Old World castle of the Moors, the Romans and the Spaniards, the shining mark of a grand and colorful old city, a place where I had moved through in the sun and studied a Spain I had learned to love. Will it ever be the same old Spain?

It should interest us to know that Sweden has just had its election, returning control of parliament to the Socialists and putting the Agrarians out of power. Why?

Because it is so interesting to President Roosevelt that he sent a special commission over there to see what it was all about. He as much as said that he was greatly intrigued by a state wherein one found a monarchy, a parliament controlled by Socialists, and a system of capitalism in full swing.

SWEDEN STILL ALIEN

Of course, the President has said that he is opposed to any alien forms for the United States, and I imagine that Sweden is still alien, although it is a country with which we have always had the most cordial relations, and the Swedes are a people for whom we always have had the greatest admiration.

But as for attempting to apply their form of politics and their economic system to the United States, that is another story.

When the Brain Trust at Washington applied production control to agriculture—and, by the way, Sweden has production control in its industrial life—they forgot about the jobs they were destroying. So it is that when they are considering the economic situation as it relates to the United States, they are likely to forget that Sweden is a closely-knit country, populated by one race and having less than one-half the population of the State of New York.

It is a common fault to overlook the obvious. The obvious has such a bad habit of upsetting theories.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"I wish," sighs Miss Alicia Woodward of New Haven, "that you would not use slang, Miss Robinson. Slang is so cheapening. I never read an article which contains any. It seems such a pity that you should lower yourself to—"

"Couldn't you, lady," pleads Mr. Bill Evans of Tucson, "cut out the poetry? I'd sure be pleased if you did. And those descriptions of scenery—they're another thing I can't take. Give us some of those red hot political wallops—they're the stuff!"

"I was particularly pleased," admits Mrs. Mary O'Conner of Santa Barbara, "with your article, 'You Can't Kill Christ.' Why don't you give us more like that? Think of the good you could do in your column if you would skip tiresome political discussions and flippant small talk, and confine yourself to inspirational subjects."

"SPITE FENCES"

So they come piling in, daily, by the hundreds—wishing I would or wouldn't—asking why I did or didn't—each one saying how he'd run the column . . . each one sure his way is best . . . never a one dreaming that he's showing himself up!

Often, reading them—or rereading some of my own past "raves!"—I think of those "spite fences" indignant householders used to build against unwelcome neighbors—never realizing that the fence harmed them far more with its ugliness, than it hurt the neighbor. Stupid things—prejudices! Every one we harbor is a "spite fence" that shuts out a world of beauty and wonder.

How proudly we boast about the things we don't like or "can't stand." And with what contempt we regard the Other Fellow's enjoyment of the things we, ourselves, do not admire or understand. You'd think—to see our smirks—that prejudice was a rare and precious talent, proof of a particularly smart or discriminating spirit. But it isn't. It's simply an evidence of IGNORANCE . . . proof of our own limitations.

You're as wide as your own interests . . . as deep as your own tolerance . . . as mature as your ability to see and adapt yourself to new aspects of life.

There's the lady who can't endure slang, who pushes aside my slangy article. But how about Life, my dear—Life, that abundant adventurer who pours her rich dreams into the slang that comes handy? Slang is simply one form of Life's infinitely varied expression—one tool for which she hammers home her meaning.

There are phases of life which only slang can express—and if you pass up slang you pass up a saving, earthy commonsense which you need as vitally as you need clean water, good bread.

PROOF OF COWARDICE

And the man—the thousands of men—who boast they "can't talk poetry. Want to know a secret, boys? You "can't take poetry" because you're afraid of it! Afraid of any things it does to you—any of the beauty you've never taken time to understand.

You might as well boast about having a tin stomach as to grin your contempt at poetry.

Stop crouching behind your "spite fences"—hiding yourself that it's a sign of your refinement, intelligence, spirituality or progressiveness.

See it, instead, for the ugly thing it is—a proof of your own cowardice, intolerance, or stupidity.

Kick that "spite fence" over and stand up!

Dare to look at everything, think about everything, take a mature interest in everything.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Oct. 10—Getting a thin sheaf of new bills at a bank this morning tapped a favorite musing that the sight of fresh, clean money always inspires. What will be its destiny? It's likely the idea is a toss-back to that classic of the grade school: "The Autobiography of a Penny."

A $20 bill may send some one to a hospital, beaten up by thugs. It may spread much happiness and, of course, corresponding sorrow. It may leave your wallet and in a few months, a soiled thing, be passed across the bar of a Singapore dive. It may launch a new life.

If some fellow in church tosses a crumpled bill on the plate I begin to ruminate on where it has been. And grow so unspiritual as to imagine, as it is tenderly carried toward the altar for benediction, many unchurchy ventures it may have undergone.

Some time or other it may have been encased in a perfumed silk stocking in the form of a reward for having smiled at some lascivious old buzzard over cocktails. It may have been part payment for a murder. Certainly nothing is truer than money is the root of all evil.

Art so often pays discouraging dividends along with the pleasant. A fellow on one of the papers is paid $100 a week for doing two thumbnail sketches for a sports page daily. The other day I bumped into a lad toting a bundle of drawings around to editors. He had landed one sketch with a weekly in Philadelphia after two years of trying, but the sale showed loss. He had spent $25 for postage and $20 for a trip to see the lady editor of the funny page.

It was foggy on the Drive this morning and sloth weather—cool and muffled—gives dampish souls a sudden spring. Liverpool weather, I call it. After such a summer, many of us long to be where it is spitting snow—to feel those icy little dots flick the cheeks. Or to stroll mid the mosses and ferns of a sunless glade. Say a ramble on the centuries of dead leaves that carpet that heavily bowered stretch of Fontainebleau, a soggy stretch the sun never reaches.

Our housekeeper's 17-year-old son, Robert, an unusually fine lad, made his first trip from home alone recently, a bus journey to Augusta, Me. His thrifty French mother went with him to purchase his tickets a few days before the high adventure.

Walking from the window, he suddenly squeezed her arm and gurgled ecstatically: "Nothing can happen now, Mother, for I have my tickets." Of course, nothing happened. How could anything happen to the sublimity of such faith?

Robert's bus left at midnight. His first trip! He could eat only a few scattery bites for dinner. So eager was he to be off he was at the depot at 10. And next morning the mother murmured a bit tremulously something like this: "Should I never see him again, I would be comforted always by the glow of happiness that lighted his face as the bus with a lurch lumbered off into night." What many of us would give to recapture the thrill of that first trip alone!

Mid-town bus depots lollop with feverish activities, somewhat like a jumpy news-reel, at midnight, the clearance hour at most terminals especially for long journeys. One of the girl passengers, an engagingly pert Bette Davis looking sprite, arrived in pinky pajamas.

The informality is marked in contrast to train travel. Seat neighbors begin to talk at once. Comfortable established folk with homes and jobs to go to. People with the Oriental indifference to time. People who are not clawing for some walloping idea to change the world.

Of all the rich, beautiful American heiresses, Doris Duke seems to take to the role most becomingly. A tall, marbly blonde, she controls one of the largest fortunes.
